A Look at the Forth Bridge and a Few Hours at Stirling Castle—The View Was Certainly Charming.

Kepler, Feb. 14.—(To the Editor): In my last letter I had hoped to give some slight description of New Edinburgh, its broad regular streets, beautiful parks and public parks and gardens and its general air of freedom and comfort, and also to go with your readers to the suburb of Leith to see the fishwives and observe their peculiar customs and dress, but owing to the time we must drop this part of the trip and set out for Stirling by way of the Forth Bridge.

I had heard much of this bridge, knew that its construction was considered the greatest piece of engineering skill yet accomplished, and even had seen photographs of it, but yet I had no idea of its magnitude. However, when flying over the Forth of Forth on the North British railway with my head out of the car windows, over one hundred and sixty feet above the water, I had a somewhat realistic impression of what this great bridge is. Again when our train stopped at the village of the earlier shore at Forth, it afforded us an opportunity to look down on the roofs of houses and the streets fully a hundred feet below the total length of the bridge is about one and a half miles. It is the highest bridge in the world, being four hundred and fifty feet from base to highest point. It is built on the cantilever or double bracket principle, the lever bracket supporting the bridge by compression, while the upper supports by tension, the two brackets are firmly interlaced with steel tubing. The piers reach from fifty to ninety feet below the water level and vary in diameter from seventy feet at the bottom to sixty feet at the top. The main piers of the cantilevers resting on these are of steel tubes twelve feet in diameter, extending to a height of about three hundred and seventy feet. Fifty four thousand tons of steel are used in constructing this bridge and it took eight million rivets to weld the pieces together. It has a metal surface of twenty five acres and requires about thirty five thousand gallons of oil to paint the work. It took seven years (1883-90) to build the bridge, the cost being over seventeen million dollars.

But we are soon in Stirling and on our way to the castle. As we draw near to the castle we come to the more ancient parts of the town. Starting up Broad Street, formerly called the High Street, the tall imposing buildings with their gables or curious designed dormer windows to the street, and their quaint mottoes remaining us at once of old town, Edinburgh. But we would not expect to see the same in Stirling with about sixteen thousand inhabitants as is seen in Edinburgh with over three hundred thousand.

At the head of Broad Street is an ancient ruin known as the King's Work built by the Earl of Mar, 1570. The face of the wall of this massive building displays some beautiful carvings, among which are the arms of Scotland and of the Earl of Mar.

BADLY SHAKEN UP

The Lieutenant-Governor Fell Down Stairs.

Toronto World. Sir Oliver Mowat sustained a nasty fall some weeks ago. The result of which was a severe cut on the forehead and a general shaking up. For one in his eighty-third year, this is a serious matter. He has been confined to his bed almost ever since. Inquiry at Government House elicited the fact that the patient was suffering severe pains in the side, the result of the wrench, but apart from this he is in his usual state of health.

Sale of Historical Estate.

Baltimore, Md., Feb. 16.—By order of the court, Mount Airy, the colonial estate of the Calvert family in Prince George's County, was put up for sale to-day. Miss Eleanor Calvert died last summer, and as there are several heirs to the property the court has ordered it to be sold so that it can be divided. Mount Airy was granted to the Calvert family in 1682 by King Charles II of England. The tract of land contained about 10,000 acres originally, but since that time about 9,000 acres have passed into strange hands. The colonial mansion, which was erected in 1751, is standing in a good state of preservation.

Gay Parliamentary Season.

London, Feb. 16.—Society is returning from the Riviera and other resorts where the winter months have been passed and the west end is livelier and more in anticipation of the opening of parliament to-morrow. The season is expected to be a very gay one. The list of receptions, political and otherwise, which are in anticipation, is a very large one.

H. K. Beveraux, Cleveland, who was the champion matinee trotter, John A. McKerron, 2451, has definitely decided to have that horse trained this year with the sole object of beating the world's record of 2:02 1/2, now held by a horse, a feat that he believes possible for the Wilkes stallion to accomplish.

Ye towers within whose circuit dread A Douglas by his voice is heard.

And next we find ourselves in the Douglas Gardens bounded by a stone rampart with a walk along the inner side. Two points of vantage are pointed out here, Queen Victoria's lookout and Queen Mary's lookout, being the places chosen by these sovereigns from which to view the surrounding country. The green lawns immediately beneath the gardens are

The Gowan or Healing Hills where many powerful nobles of Scotland were banished. To the eastward the view from the Forth is still more grand than from the esplanade. Through the beautiful valley for miles we can trace the windings of this noble stream, while the Ochills, beginning with the bold outlines of the Abbey Craig extending away in the distance and gradually lose themselves in a vapory indistinctness. And nearer still is the tower of Allan, famous as a watering place, where Wallace fought so fiercely for Scottish freedom (Stirling Bridge, 1297). Northward we see the Bridge of Allan, famous as a watering place, presenting its bold crescent embowered with trees, and close beyond, the ridge which marks the battle field of Sheriffmuir. To the west the vale of Menteith bounded by the Menteith hills on the north and the Lennox hills on the south. I spent some time tracing the course of "the many Forth" meandering through the vale and giving back its full effect on the landscape from up the towers of Doune, where the Albanians ruled for ages until the family, including the Duke of Albany, his two sons and father-in-law, Earl of Lennox, in his eightieth year, were brought to trial before King James, condemned, and executed on the Gowan Hill, almost in sight of their ancient castle. To the south we see the Gullies Hill covered with evergreens and the field of Banockburn marked by a tall flag staff standing beside the ancient barrowstone in which Bruce placed his standard at the battle. A little further away is the field of Sauchieburn where James III. fell to his death. Further still is the Torwood, where the hostile armies of Cromwell and Lesley manoeuvred, and where legend says Wallace once hid in a big oak. But our letter has grown too long. I must now rejoin our squadron of gallant Hussars at London and return to "Our Lady of the Snows," better known as "Home Street Home." DER TRAGE REISENDE.

Moving To Kingston.

Yarker, Feb. 16.—Capt. William Montgomery and family have decided to move to Kingston. He has resided in Yarker about eighteen years. A horse buyer here last week purchased horses from Arthur Irish, A. Conolly and E. W. Benjamin. Factory hands are all working overtime now. A young man of an religion, created a sensation here and in Oshawa by his furious driving. He said the horse was bewitched and the Lord told him to drive it to death. Almost Williamson of his late father, near between "The Farmer" Cheese factory, Peterborough, was not purchased by Vanhous Bros., as the farmers interested in it decided not to sell it, but will continue it on. Jessie Winter leaves for a week. John Winter was home Sunday from Moscow. The Charity concert, held Saturday night, was a success in every particular. The hall was filled by an appreciative audience. The negro minstrel party were well put on, and all the performers rendered their parts well. Home talent and for a home cause fills the house every time.

Received Bounty For Wolves.

Wilbur, Feb. 12.—The meeting of the shareholders of the Willow Brook Farm, took place on Monday, February 9th. James Moore, W. J. Donaldson and James Allan bought the factory, but have not yet decided as to whether it will run the coming season or not. Mr. Bur was called to the house of T. Richardson to attend his son James. We are sorry to learn Dr. Burrows is likely to leave soon. Robert Sprague got one of his horses in Mad Lake, and later on by selling getting him out. W. J. Donaldson is having logs and other timbers to Oshawa. Lumbermen claim there is no frost in the swamps near the mill. We regret to hear that it is very difficult to get through. Mr. and Mrs. Maxwell Donaldson and family, Leithbridge, after a visit at their brother's here, left for home last week. Silas Jacobs brought two large wolf skins to W. J. Donaldson, J. P. for bounty. The bounty given by N. M. Jones was well treasured, and a good time enjoyed. Messrs. Vrooman and Wood have been appointed auditors for the township. Mrs. J. Jones for some time confined to bed with rheumatism, a letter from M. Morrow is visiting by Playfairville.

Glenburnie Gleanings.

Glenburnie, Feb. 9.—The Presbyterian church services in the school house. They propose building a church in the spring. We regret to hear of the accident to Neal McCallum. He took his leg by slipping on the ice near his residence on February 6th. Mr. Fair is drawing timber; he intends to build a house for himself. James H. H. and family are on the sick list, and has gone to the city for medical treatment. Our population is increasing rapidly. N. M. Jones was well attended, and a good time enjoyed. Messrs. Vrooman and Wood have been appointed auditors for the township. Mrs. J. Jones for some time confined to bed with rheumatism, a letter from M. Morrow is visiting by Playfairville.

Mrs. Ward Weds Again.

New York, Feb. 16.—A Paris dispatch tells of the wedding at San Remo, Italy, today, of Mrs. Reginald Ward and her second husband, Mr. Graham. The wedding was attended by the bride's mother and several other relatives and friends. Both parties to the marriage are well known in the city. The bride is the daughter of Victor Jacobowitz of this city.
