The Dry Cough of Bronchitis The Distressing Asthma Gasp

The chest pains and soreness, the tightness and desperate struggle for breath, with recurring and increased violence, drive many to despair who have not yet learned of the efficiency of

Dr. Chase's Syrup of LINSEED AND TURPENTINE

Bronchitis and Asthma are very similar in nature and frequently go hand in hand. They require similar treatment, for in both diseases the distressing symptoms result from contraction and closing up of the bronchial tubes and hence difficult breathing, coughing and expectoration.

Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine not only affords prompt relief, which in itself is considered sufficient reason for its use, but actually cures these ailments and prevents their recurrence.

BRONCHITIS

Or "cold on the chest," as it is known to many, is marked by chest pains and soreness, which become more severe on taking a long breath and are aggravated with coughing.

Bronchitis is most dreaded because it has a tendency to become chronic and return again and again until the patient becomes worn out or falls an easy prey to consumption or pneumonia.

Because it is mistaken for an ordinary cold bronchitis is too frequently allowed to fasten itself on the system. Just as soon as there is a feeling of tightness in the chest or soreness on taking a long breath you have reason to fear bronchitis and any delay at this point is dangerous to say the least.

ASTHMA

Occurs in paroxysms and usually at night. The patient awakens with a feeling of suffocation; he is unable to lie down, but finds relief in sitting with his elbows on his knees, head thrown back and mouth open.

There is considerable coughing with asthma and expectoration of mucus, but this varies according to the amount of accompanying bronchitis.

Be Suspicious of the Substitutor

When you decide that Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine will be of benefit to you do not allow your dealer to persuade you to accept something said to be "just as good."
