Those interested in university education in Ontario must have observed the provincial university. Most people that recently the question of governtion; whooping coming to the front, and in the special interest of one institution, it is contended that no assistance should wants of the University of Toronto shall have been supplied, and also that no government aid be given to government control. Let us try to see the bearings of this view.

The subject of government aid has with the question of denominational colleges. Now, although most of the colleges of Ontario were originally denominational, yet, after varied experthe Sandfield Macdonald government in 1869 solved, at least for the time, the problem by cutting off all assistance from such colleges. On that poliorgans in a strong, healthy 'cy is not offered criticism. It has be cy of the government. There is no party is likely to reverse it. Any col lege, therefore, that seeks government assistance must first show that it undenominational, as, for instance, Queen's University has done, which as national as any college in Canada and is in a special sense the universi-

In regard to question, the two-fold position, above referred to, has now been taken by some who would confine the provinci ai aid to the University of Toronto It is contended, on the one hand, that there must be no assistance given to any college outside that university un til its wants have been supplied. Or the other hand it is urged that college which is not under direct govlernment control. Those who urge the first position fail to explain how much
