An effort is being made, but without much success, to introduce a new color of Paris, which is turquoise blue color. It is exceedingly ugly when seen by itself, but fortunately transmits becoming lights to most complexions. On a few, and those having bluish undertones, it is a great degree natural. It would appear that the turquoise veil would be short lived, but who can say. No one would have predicted that the starting green, worn a season ago, would have attained its great popularity.

A group of bright intelligent women chatting over the tea cups yesterday at the residence of a well-known society woman in town, discussed the old-fashioned and coming to higher recognition as she does, she will be heartily welcomed in Toronto.

know what one can and cannot do, and abide by it. No hostess would willingly lay a snare for a friend. When entertained she gives for the young people the best provisions for them accordingly, and usually nothing in the slightest alcoholic is given. There are many who would not add a drop of alcohol to a quart of soup, nor in the same proportion to a sauce for a pudding, and yet abroad through Southern Europe wine is taken at the early morning meal. It is a matter of custom. Temperance in its true meaning is all things, and what is required is abstinence in something else. "Voilà," in Toronto News.

A letter from Ottawa to a Halifax paper contains the following: The leader of the procession and his wife, who have arrived in Ottawa for the season, have taken rooms this year again at the "Sherbrooke." It has always been Mr. Borden's hope, and even more the desire of his wife, to take a house in Ottawa and make it a similar centre of hospitality to their beautiful home by the sea. Mr. and Mrs. Borden have always wished that their seasonal friends, especially Mr. Borden's confidants, might while in the capital, be able to enjoy the same hospitality as they do at the "Sherbrooke," or such as their political opponents find in the home of Sir Wilfrid and Lady Laurier, which should be less a rallying place than a cozy, hospitable home where social pleasures might be enjoyed. Unfortunately so far it has been impossible to find a suitable house and Mrs. Borden's entertainments must be very small or else given at the "Sherbrooke" in the Russell House. As she is one of the most tactful and gracious of hostesses, as well as one of the most charming and brilliant women in the city, it is needless to say that her entertainments, large or small, are always among the most enjoyable of social functions.

The "world do move," even in the get up of missionary magazines. In a paper, containing the names of the members of the Church of England Women's Auxiliary, in regard to that society's pages in the "New Era," the new organ of the consolidated general mission board, the editor asks for the latest news concerning the work in the mission field both at home and abroad, and forcibly suggests that it be put in the form of short paragraphs, which will catch the eye, rather than long-winded articles, which nobody but the compiler would think of reading. This is the day of the newspaper, and not of the blue book.

A Bucharest, Roumania, paper, under date of December 18th, says: Monday morning at the British legation the religious marriage was celebrated of Mr. Edwin Goodwin, eldest son of Mr. E. E. Goodwin, director of the Bank of Roumania, and Madeline Goodwin, nee Soutzo, and Miss Hilda Dolores (Doris) Stewart Patterson, daughter of the Rev. R. Stewart Patterson, retired chaplain of the British army, formerly chaplain to the first Red River expedition under Lord Wolseley, K.C.M.G. His Excellency Sir John Kennedy, minister plenipotentiary of Great Britain, gave away the bride, and the witnesses were Colonel George, aide-de-camp to His Majesty the King of Roumania; Mr. A. Green, Mr. Boxshall, vice-consul-general of the United States, and Commandant Soutzo, of the First Red River expedition, and the wedding presents were numerous and magnificent. The report adds: The charming couple left on the 5:50 train en route for Vienna, Paris, Brest, London and London, where they will take up residence.

A Boston letter tells us that there has been a very decided change in sentiment with the consumers of women's shoes in favor of lighter weight footwear. The heavier or mannish shoes in vogue have practically been eliminated in demand. The demand is veering toward the lighter, more comfortable, and for smaller, neater, more attractive shape, for closer edges, and a lighter weight boot in character generally. This change in sentiment toward the lighter footwear is causing a large increase in the sale of single and double sole, machine sewed shoes, and particularly in the light level edge machine sewed work.

A Bal Poudre given at Palm Beach, Florida, was one of the most splendid ever seen there, or indeed, anywhere in the world, and given at "Whitcomb," the beautiful house of Mr. and Mrs. Henry M. Flager, the scene was like the "Tales of the Arabian Nights." The house is fitted with gorgeous tapestries, paintings, etc., and the rose garden, rose arbor, lake and shrubbery were illuminated with hundreds of miniature electric lights. Mrs. Flager wore an exquisite white lace dress and her famous pearls. A possum mimnet was danced by the women in superb costumes of colonial times. The Duke and Duchess of Manchester were present. A grand cotillon was danced after supper. As it was originally intended as a Washington birthday ball, the favors were to be appropriate, so pots of cherry trees and silver hatchets were given, also red, white and blue umbrellas and sashes, brooches, cuff links and Whitehall loving cups, as souvenirs.

The greatest sensation was the picturesque entry of Mrs. William Lawrence Green of Albany, drawn in a mass of gorgeous flower furies, which she threw out to those in the cotillon as she went along.

ASSOUAN DAM. Sir Benjamin Baker Describes Its Features. Sir Benjamin Baker thus describes his work in The London Magazine: "Assouan dam is not a solid wall, but is pierced with sluice openings of sufficient area for the flood discharge of the river, which may amount to 35,000 tons of water per second. The masonry of the dam is of local granite, set in British Portland cement mortar. The interior is of rubble set by hand, with about 40 per cent of the bulk in cement mortar, four of sand to one of cement. All the face-work is of coursed rock-faced ashlar, except the sluice linings, which are simply dressed. This is of stone-grain and Italian masonry work. There were a great pressure at times to get a section completed before the inevitable rise of the Nile, and as much as 3,000 tons of masonry were executed per day, under one point in the dam. A triple line of railway and numerous trucks and locomotives were provided to convey the materials from quarries and stores to every part of the work. The maximum number of men employed was 31,000, of whom 1,000 were European masons and other skilled men.

Mr. Wilfred Stokes, chief engineer and managing director of Messrs. Parsons, is responsible for the detailed designing and manufacture of the sluices and lock-gates; 140 of the sluices are 23 feet high by 6 feet 6 inches wide, and 40 of them are half that height; 130 of the sluices are on the Stoney principle, with rollers, and the remainder move on sliding surfaces. The larger of the Stoney sluices weigh 14 tons, and are capable of being moved by hand under a head of water producing a pressure of 450 tons against the sluice.

There are five lock-gates, 32 feet wide and varying in height up to 30 feet. They are of an entirely different type of ordinary folding lock-gates, being hung from the top of rollers, and moving like a sliding coach-house door. This arrangement was adopted for safety, as a thousand tons of water are stored up above the lock-gates, and each of the two upper gates is made strong enough to hold up the water, assuming the four other gates were destroyed. When the river is rising the sluices will all be open, and the 900 water will pass freely through, without depositing the fertilizing silt. After the flood, when the water has become clear, and the discharge of the Nile has fallen to about 2,000 tons per second, the gates without rollers will be closed, and then some of those with rollers; so that, between December and March, the reservoir will be gradually filled. The re-opening of the sluices will take place between May and July, according to the state of the Nile and the requirements of the crops.

Between December and May, when the reservoir is full, the island of Philae will in places be almost flooded. As the temples are founded partly on loose silt and sand, the saturation of the hitherto dry soil will cause settlements, and no doubt injury to the monuments. To obviate this risk, all the important parts, including the well known Kiak or "Pharaoh's Bed," have been either carried on steel girders or underpinned down to rock, or, failing that, to the permanent bed of the Nile. It need hardly be said that having regard to the shattered condition of the columns and entablatures, the friability of the stone, and the amount of water which will be in the process of underpinning was an exceptionally difficult and dangerous task.

A BALLOONIST'S ADVENTURE. Story of the Flight of Stanley Spencer, the English Aeronaut. Mr. A. F. tells a story of one of the adventures of Stanley Spencer, the English aeronaut. It was at Hong Kong, and the balloon was rent in making the ascent. However, not to be deterred by the crowd, Mr. Spencer determined to trust to his luck, and gave the order to let go. The balloon shot up, the hot air pouring from the aperture. The aeronaut soon reached 600 feet, and the parachute was beginning to get ready when the balloon suddenly collapsed, and, after a vain endeavor to loosen the parachute, he fell like a stone. During the whole of that fall he was conscious, and he felt only one thing, which was that he was only a diu wonder as to what he would strike. Twice he turned completely over and then crashed on to rocky cliffs, 150 feet above the sea level. Some Jack, in a moment of horrified spectators rushed to pick up his remains and found him not only alive, but conscious.

"Are you hurt?" they asked, with the faintest of men deeply moved. "Only carried away a mainstay, boys!" was the cheery response, and then the plucky man faintly, he had broken his tibia, but that and some bruises were his only injuries. A fall of 450 feet on to rocks and live! The explanation lies in the fact that the parachute struck the sloping side of the cliff and slithered down to the bottom.

A Curious Tree. There is a tree in the West Indies that the natives say "grows dishes." It looks like an apple tree. They call it "bears very queer leaves and large white blossoms that grow right from the trunk and larger branches. After the flower comes the fruit, just as our apples or peaches do. But this fruit is in the shape of a gourd, only stronger and much larger, sometimes a foot in diameter.

Now, see what a use the people of that country make of this fruit. The shell is so hard that all sorts of big and little dishes and drinking cups can be carved out of it. Even pots and kettles are made and used over the fire, but of course they cannot last as long as our iron ones. Is not this a serviceable tree? No wonder the natives are proud of it.

Omega Oil For Women

After all, there isn't very much difference between a woman and a man. Both sexes have pains and aches pretty much alike. And yet it is commonly believed that when a woman suffers from pain she has "female trouble." Very often this is not strictly true, as that phrase is understood. It would be just as ridiculous to say a man had "male trouble" when he suffered.

Omega Oil relieves most of the pains and aches of women, as well as of men. It gives great relief to the squeezed up flesh and muscles after a corset is taken off. It does wonders for a weak, tired, aching back. It takes lameness out of the shoulders, soreness out of the limbs and feet, and quiets pains and aches in the flesh, muscles and joints of the whole body.

Women are advised to first take a refreshing bath in the morning or evening, and then rub Omega Oil briskly into the aching parts. A brisk rubbing not only gets the Oil into the pores, but quickens the circulation of the blood. This stimulates and does lots of good.

A severe illness left my blood in an impoverished condition, and my legs and feet were swollen to an enormous size. I tried Omega Oil, and the swelling was very much reduced by its application, and that strained feeling of the skin completely removed. I have since recommended it for various purposes, and have yet to hear of a case where it failed to produce the desired effect.

MRS. A. BURNE, 150 Third Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y. Omega Oil is good for everything a liniment ought to be good for.
