WRONG EXISTS

IN TAKING MONEY MADE IN LIQUOR TRAFFIC

For Church or Charitable Purposes—Dr. Aykroyd Discusses the Question in Detail.

Kingston, March 11.—(To the Editor): The following paragraph appears in the Whig of Friday the 6th: "A clergyman in the Whig of Friday the 6th said: 'I did not know that the money of the poor, the money of the distiller and brewer not potent for good?'

To the first two questions most everyone will answer in the affirmative, but because they will not necessarily follow the logic of the first question, the third question will find many an answer in the negative. This question of which we here have, a concrete example is agitating the world to-day, and many people in the world to-day, as I have no doubt it has done in the past; and I am well aware that it cannot be settled definitely by debate or argument, for individuals will look at it from various viewpoints, and there can be no harm in discussing it. First then, let us look at these questions asked, specifically; and secondly, we shall consider the subject generally.

"Is the money of the distiller and brewer not potent for good?" Yes! Suppose one asks, is the money of the thief and robber not potent for good? Yes. Where is the difference in principle involved? Would you accept the money of a thief and robber, and thereby say to him go and steal some more and come and give it to me for the very laudable purpose of helping the poor. We think not. You would have the thief and robber arrested, and the money taken from him and restored to the rightful owner, and never think for a moment of how much good the money would do for the poor. But, you say the brewer and distiller is not a thief and robber, and thereby say to him go and steal some more and come and give it to me for the very laudable purpose of helping the poor. We think not. You would have the thief and robber arrested, and the money taken from him and restored to the rightful owner, and never think for a moment of how much good the money would do for the poor. But, you say the brewer and distiller is not a thief and robber, and thereby say to him go and steal some more and come and give it to me for the very laudable purpose of helping the poor. We think not. You would have the thief and robber arrested, and the money taken from him and restored to the rightful owner, and never think for a moment of how much good the money would do for the poor.

"The First Law Book." The well-known Asserologist, Dr. Hugo Winckler, has published an edition of the legislation promulgated by King Amraphal, of Babylon, which, so far as is known at present, was the first book of laws given to the world. King Amraphal lived 2250 years B. C., and is mentioned in the Bible as a contemporary of Abraham, so that his statutes were drawn up fully five centuries before the laws of Moses. They number 282, and contain the following: "If a woman who sells beverages gives bad value for the money paid to her, she shall be thrown into water."

"A certain amount of nervous energy is necessary to stimulate the digestive organs in their work. When the nerves are weakened and exhausted and nerve force lacking, or when nervous energy and consequent excessive mental labor or over-exertion of other organs, digestion is impaired, and headaches and dizziness spells come on."

Nervous Dyspepsia

Indigestion, Headache and Dizziness Spells the Result of Exhausted Nerves—Lasting Cure Effected by Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

A certain amount of nervous energy is necessary to stimulate the digestive organs in their work. When the nerves are weakened and exhausted and nerve force lacking, or when nervous energy and consequent excessive mental labor or over-exertion of other organs, digestion is impaired, and headaches and dizziness spells come on. This is why so many business and professional men and women, and others complain of indigestion, sleeplessness and accompanying ills. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food permanently cures such ailments, and restores the system to its normal and healthy condition. It is the most satisfactory treatment obtainable for nervous dyspepsia and indigestion.

Mrs. John Liston, 43 Ordinance St., Kingston, Ont., states: "I have been troubled a great deal with indigestion and nervous dyspepsia and subject to severe attacks of headache. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food highly recommended I began a treatment with this remedy. I can say now that my nerves are steadier, the headaches gone and my digestion very much improved. I can speak very highly of this medicine for the above ailments because it has proven wonderfully beneficial in my case."

A Paradise For The Sportsman.

The wild rugged grandeur of its scenery, the health giving properties of the atmosphere, the personal wildness of the surroundings, and the splendid fishing and hunting grounds of the Lake Nipissing and French River districts in the "Highlands of Ontario" about 200 miles north of Toronto and reached by excellent transportation service, are attracting thousands of sportsmen who do not care for the gaieties of the modern summer resorts, but prefer the untrodden forests and the pleasures to be derived from outdoor life. Black bears, minkione and pickled fishing unexcelled.

DARLINGS OF OLD MEN.

Interesting Statistics on April and December Marriages.

New York World. For a half-century graduates, aged twenty-two, who has married the octogenarian Marquis of Donnell there is the excuse, admittedly valid by even captious members of her sex, that she married a title. For the elderly bridegroom, apart from sentimental considerations, there is the incentive of longevity. The statistics prove that old men live longer if married than if single.

Dr. Zill's figures for Europe indicated that among men past seventy the death rate is 45 per 1,000 for the married, as against 71 for the single. Dr. Schwartz, examining the fact that of 40 centenarians examined by him not one was a bachelor or spinster, showed that of men who live to be 90 the ratio is nine married to three single. Among individual examples of matrimony longevity, James Nicholas Linn, Goshen, N.Y., may be cited. The doctor-preacher-author married thirteen wives and lived to be 99. To what extent did each of his helpmates contribute to his length of years? Presumably an amiable wife would add a year where a Xantippe might cut one off.

It is a normal act for a man to marry, and a woman to be married. Statistics collected in Germany show that of 1,000 bridegrooms only 89 chose women older than themselves. A difference of 60 years is, of course, wholly abnormal. In New York city in one year, the number of couples married in whose ages there was a disparity of twenty years or more, was 818; but among these there were few in whom the difference exceeded 40 years.

Doubtless the controlling impulse with women who marry men greatly older than themselves is money: an examination of some sixteen cases reported in the World indicates as much. Yet there have been important sentimental exceptions. Sentiment was the motive that led Ida Kriebel, 46, of Allentown, Pa., to marry Jacob Dorsey, 60, though by so doing she became her own grand-mother. Agnes May, 20, who married William Cheney, 70, of Bowling Green, O., was the grandchild of his first love, and for that reason romantically inspired toward him. Nellie White, 22, who became the wife of Zerah Pomeroy, 89, of Maricott, Conn., was a grandchild of his first sweetheart. The way of the man with the maid in these cases was an appeal to the romance in her nature.

"Extraordinary Extravagance of a New York Woman." It is enough to make even the most extravagant daughter of Eve exclaim to learn that a New York society woman recently paid $1,650 for a single hat, says the Philadelphia Ledger. The hat was ordered from a Fifth Avenue milliner who has managed to secure the cream of society's custom. The price originally named for it to the intending purchaser was $1,500, but it was found that less material was required than first anticipated, and $150 was deducted from the estimate.

Four Russian sable skins, absolutely flawless and of the finest quality procurable, were used in the making. The largest of the skins, all of which were of the costly East Siberia quality, measured fourteen inches in length, six inches in width, and were fine in texture and very glossy. The hat frame was a big flare, rolled slightly on the left side. Great skill was required in covering it with the fur in the manner indicated in the illustration, and without the aid of scissors. There was no trimming whatever except in the sable tails, which were utilized to the best possible advantage.

When it was found every employe in the millinery establishment took turns in visiting the workroom to have a peep at it, and every one from the head woman, who is struggling along on a salary of $100 per week, to the little errand boy, who has just begun rich on his weekly stipend of $3, had some opinion to voice as to its beauty. It was altogether a new experience to see a triumph of their art disposed of at a figure over the thousand-dollar mark, even in that palace of high prices, and their excitement was on par with the record-breaking price.

When the hour for trying on the hat was at hand, considerable trepidation was felt by the head milliner. If the customer did not like it, the matter would take on a serious aspect, and if it had to be remodeled, who knew what would result. But all fears proved groundless. The purchaser expressed unqualified approval of the effect, and the entire staff of saleswomen agreed with her in thinking it was vastly becoming. It secured for the milliner a dollar mark, even in that palace of high prices, and their excitement was on par with the record-breaking price.

Preachers All Dead.

Chicago Chronicle. Joseph Parker is dead, Talmage is dead, Moody is dead, Spurgeon is dead, Beecher, Storrs, Taylor, all are dead. Of the large and illustrious company who a few years ago were masters of pulpit and platform, all have passed away, save one, the noble Alexander Macdonald, of England. "And where are their successors?" asks the New York Observer editor. "Men tell me that we have so many great preachers now that no one is able to usurp a prominent place. It is nonsense, however, consoling it may be to individual pride. The world is to-day without a single preacher, if we except the one noted, of the very first magnitude. But this argues no deterioration. It is only another illustration of the periodic alterations in the church of God."
