New dress regulations will shortly be issued from the militia department which refer mostly to camp uniforms. These will be simple and inexpensive in character, the object being to bear as lightly as possible on the pockets of young officers. The full dress of all arms of the service still remains handsome and costly, but no one seems to be quite sure what it is. A dashing young soldier informed me that steel spurs and scabbards were de riquer for all ranks but though I am a civilian I fancy this dress is

The debate on the question of abolshing cigarette smoking was a burning one, occasioned some humor, and was generally conducted with great cheerfulness. Effective legislation on such a subject was admitted to be difficult and the premier and Mr. Brock, M.P., agreed that the practice could best be curbed by proper home education rather than by statute.
