GLAD EASTER. JOYFUL AND HEARTY SERVICES WERE HELD.

Large Congregations at St. Mary's—The Feast Kept in the Various Protestant Churches of the City—Beautiful Decorations and Appropriate Sermons and Music.

The Easter day services at St. George's cathedral were very largely attended, the congregations including an encouraging number of men. The day began with celebration at 6:30. The officiant, the Rev. George L. Starr, followed by another plain celebration at eight, the dean celebrating, matins at ten, taken by the dean, and the choral celebration at mid-day. The bishop celebrated, and also administered the elements, the dean, Canon Grant and Rev. William Lewis assisting. The introit was the Easter anthem, the office was finely sung to the accompaniment of beautiful painting, and Sullivan's "Christ is Risen," and other Easter hymns were heartily sung by choir and people. The offertory was "Hallelujah Chorus." The Rev. J. J. Crothers, preaching from the text "This is the day which the Lord hath made, we will rejoice and be glad in it." "The festival," said the preacher, "was the most joyous in the whole year. Christmas was tinged with sadness, and the thought of the Lord's own death into His own. His own received Him not. The Ascension was tinged with the sadness of farewell. But today there was the rejoicing of restoration, of uncertainty made sure, of perfect victory gained. Nature, through the flowers, and art through music, contributed to the joyousness of the season. These should be the outward expressions of the pure joy of those who were keeping the feast in sincerity and truth."

At evening service was again well attended, the anthem being "Behold, I show you a Mystery," and Clara's "The setting of the sun." The Rev. J. J. Crothers, preaching from the text "I am He that liveth and was dead, and behold, I am alive for ever more." There is but one thing which can form the subject of the Easter joy, and that is resurrection. We are too much inclined to think of the cross and the grave, instead of on the life and the throne. Our faith should be in the resurrection, and in the Easter Day commemorates the great victory gained over death. The resurrection is the death of its terrors, and has made it but the blessed portal through which we enter to the life beyond. The bishop concluded by exhorting his people to always remember that in almost the last recorded words of our Lord, He had declared himself to be the "living one," as the revised version has it, the unshattered, Eternal One, and that with Him were the keys of the gates of death and Hades, which He Himself, opened and no man can shut, and shut, and no man can open. The altar and sanctuary were decked with white flowers.

At St. Mary's Cathedral, the Queen of Festivals was celebrated with all the splendor of the beautiful ritual of the Roman Catholic church. At early mass, vast numbers of the people partook of holy communion. At 10:30 pontifical grand mass was celebrated by his grace the archbishop, assisted by Revs. Frs. Hanley and Hannagan, dean and sub-deacon respectively. Rev. Fr. Keenan, dean of the mass, and Rev. Fr. Mea, acted as master of ceremonies. The archbishop, vested in his rich robes of office at the throne after the Aspergus. The scene at the opening of the mass was solemn and imposing. "Agnus Dei" was rendered by the choir in an excellent manner. The different parts were executed with marked ability. In the evening pontifical mass were sung and a sermon on the resurrection preached. The altars were magnificently decorated with Easter lilies and golden flowers and were illuminated with the lights of waxen tapers and colored lights, presenting a scene of grandeur and beauty. In the several, conventional institutions the services were of the same imposing and solemn nature.

First Baptist Church.
The services yesterday were in keeping with the evening event, which the Easter season commemorates. The pastor's subject in the morning was "The First Message of the Resurrected Christ," which proved the basis of a helpful sermon. "Why no many fail to Accept Christ?" was the evening theme. The congregations were good. The work of the choir was excellent, and T. Singleton, choir director, is to be congratulated on the very fine singing of the Easter hymns, the choir being blooming plants helped to lend brilliancy to the services of the glad Easter day.

Among the Churches.
Twelve churches are to be built in the diocese of Bloomington, South Africa. Confirmation services will be conducted in St. James' church next Sunday morning by Bishop Miles.

The organ which Lord Overton and James Thomson have presented to the U. E. high church Dunbarton, has cost $10,000.

The communicants at St. George's cathedral on Sunday numbered 146, a larger number than at any previous time in the cathedral's history.

Easter Sunday was appropriately observed in all the churches, which had large congregations throughout the city.

CAPTAIN DEAD. CAPT. MILLER PASSED AWAY ON SUNDAY.

Thirty Years on the Folger Boats—A Most Popular Marine—Cancerous Growth on the Neck Ended His Life.
Capt. Andrew Miller, of the "White Squadron," died at his home on Colborne street on Sunday morning. He was a great sufferer since October last from a cancerous growth on the neck, which developed rapidly, and forced him to relinquish command of the steamer New Island Wanderer. The Folgers sent him to New York some time ago, at their own expense, for special treatment, but little hope was held out for his recovery. He was able to be out Friday morning, but grew weaker during the day, finally lapsing into unconsciousness, a Prothonotary relieving him of his suffering. At eight o'clock on Sunday Sabbath morning, his voyage over life's tempestuous sea came to an end, and he entered the haven of rest.

The late capt. Miller was born in Canada. His first command here was brought with his parents to the United States in the forties, when a mere child. His parents settled at Cape Vincent, and there he lived for several years, and then he went to the water, and his crewing. His first steamboat experience was with Capt. Hinkley on the old steamer "Pierpont." Then he was on the boats of the "Northern Transportation Corporation" line, running from Cape Vincent to Chicago.

Early in the seventies, he entered the employment of the Folgers at Kingston, and was with them ever since. His first command here was the steamer "Pierpont," which he retained for many years. Then he took charge of the steamer "Islander," and later the steamer "Empire State," New Island Wanderer and the "Cape Vincent," which he ran for the past two or three years.

Capt. Miller was one of the most experienced and popular captains on the Upper St. Lawrence and knew no fear. He was a man whom the passengers liked to meet, for he gave them every personal attention. For his age he was remarkably active and agile. The flags on the "White Squadron" and other boats are flying at half-mast out of respect to his memory.

Deceased was married to Miss Mary Rector, of Cape Vincent, who, with two daughters, Ida and Jessie, survives in Kingston. He was an attendant at the First Congregational church. He was a member of Cataract lodge, No. 10, I.O.O.F.

Many local offerings rest on the coffin of the late capt. Miller, who was buried in Kingston on Saturday afternoon. He was a member of the Folger boat sent a beautiful anchor, Henry Folger and Howard S. Folger, of the Thousand Island Steamboat company, wreaths; the daughters of the late Capt. Miller, and the Folger family, I.O.O.F. and other friends.

Tuesday afternoon, will likely be conducted under Oddfellows auspices.

HOW ALICE DID IT.
Learned To Follow Instructions.
"I puzzled mother mightily one morning after a return from visiting some friends. She had suffered terribly from sleeplessness caused by coffee drinking, and of course general nervousness and stomach trouble. I tried to get her to stop drinking coffee, but she would not. I said 'Some one told her to quit coffee and use Postum Food Coffee, but the first morning it was served to her it was so insipid and weak that she gave it up and went to drinking hot water for the rest of the day for tea or coffee.' 'About this time I went visiting, and during the conversation, in reply to an inquiry about mother's health, I told her of the failure of the failure of the new drink that we tried. 'I observed that my friend looked rather knowing and wise at this statement, but thought nothing more of it. 'In the morning at breakfast I served with a most delicious cup of coffee which I drank with great pleasure, but I noticed my hostess watch me intently, finally I asked for a second cup and she handed me one, and remarked 'So your folks don't like Postum.' I was astonished, and said 'This is not Postum is it?' She replied for the package in order to satisfy me, and it was exactly like the one mother had. Then I learned that the one failure was caused from not boiling it long enough, so when I reached home I told mother I had found a new drink for her and she went into the kitchen and made it from her old package of Postum. She was so delighted with the new drink that I told her it was Postum, and it was amusing to watch her perplexity. She looked at the package and said 'I never had any Postum.' 'Alice how did you ever do it?' I said 'By simply following the directions.' She exclaimed, 'Why I did not see there were any directions.' It seems that she had not looked at the package but just brewed it with a little hot water like she would tea, and that will not take good Postum. It must be boiled just as the directions say, and it is delicious. 'The next day mother said to give a little coffee party and we served Postum instead of coffee. The ladies were so delighted with it, and we now have Postum instead of coffee, and it is the favorite of the different ladies as how well they feel and how soundly they sleep at night since they have adapted Postum instead of the old fashionable coffee, and particularly since they have followed directions. Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

STILL ANOTHER. SERIES OF LETTERS FROM MRS. CRUMLEY.

A Visit to Athens and Other Spots Made Famous in Grecian History—Travels in Judea.
Most charming letters have been received from Mrs. Edward Crumley, and the Whig has been given the privilege of publishing portions of them. Mrs. Crumley begins her letter of February 24th with a description of the beautiful harbor of Piræus, the bay lying calm and clear in the morning sunlight, the mountains all around in the distance, and as far as the eye could see boats, boats, boats, a wilderness of spars and smoke-stacks, and here and there a British iron-clad, with guns protruding everywhere. Taking the train for Athens, they were soon in sight of the ancient ruins famous in history. They visited the Acropolis, the Parthenon, the temple of Athena Nike, and heard a lecture by Prof. Richardson, of the American school at Athens, from the steps of the Propylæa. From the Acropolis the party was driven to the temple of Theseus, the ancient market place, past Mars Hill, and the old cemetery, and then to the "Grand Bretagne" for luncheon. The old Greek city seems to be one tone of soft cream, color, and the Venetian marble employed in the walls of the buildings; and in its setting of orange and olive trees, palms, and cacti, which grow in great profusion, makes a picture of rare beauty, reminding one of perpetual summer.

At Athens, the general manager of the North German Lloyd line, Herr Pick, left for his home in Bremen, much regretted by all as he had been the soul of kindness and hospitality.

Sayre's Mrs. Crumley says, is dazzlingly beautiful, viewed from the harbor, "but the dirtiest place in the world on close inspection." Packs of wretched-looking curs are everywhere, and it is considered a worse crime to kill a dog than a man. The mosques and treasure-houses of Constantinople were a marvel, and slippers must be put on ere the former are entered, lest the soles of the Christians "pollute" the holy temples. They visited Santa Sophia, and Sultana Ahmed, and saw Turkey's wonderful treasure-house. The golden frame of the sultan's throne is studded with diamonds and the throne itself encrusted with pearls, rubies, emeralds and diamonds.

The mosque where the sultan comes once a year to pray before-taking a new wife—was visited, and they had the privilege of going through its most celebrated rooms in the palace, which is the most magnificent one in the world. Col Ahmed Pasha, one of his majesty's officers lunched on board the Kaiserin, at the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Crumley and Mrs. Hyman, and afterwards did the honors of the palace, where they were feasted on rose leaf jam and coffee, "with the sultan's compliments."
