FLOWERS! FLOWERS! FLOWERS! YES

In all literature, from the songs of the tenderest and sweetest strains of the past have been lavished flowers. Chaucer, Herrick, Spencer, Wadsworth, Burns, Kents and Sha speare have reeled off ringing verses inspired by violets, and dais blossoms all through mellifiuous Persian poetry, and the troub chanted in the starlight to pearly marguerites.

The flowers of poetry are here-just as nature makes themperfumes; they are ready for gathering and there is nothing more more buoyant, of lovlier spring hues, of a lovlier Easter impulse SELECT A BECOMING HAT
