Mr. Whitney claimed that the attorney-general had arrayed his facts so as to sustain his general objections to municipal ownership, and that in this view he was at variance with the majority of the people of the province hough they may not have, as a rule, studied the question deeply.

The appointing of a committee was ot opposed, since there was no desire to stop the progress of bills municipal exploiting presented this session while a year was spent searching for evidence and pointers. Mr. Crawford took a view opposite to the attorney-general's as to municipal utilities in England, urging that great debts were met largely by valuable assets. The premier closed debate by declaring that there was W. J. Marsh, late of Consecon, is danger in the municipal agitation for utilities and that the wisest thing was Kenneth H.
