Macedonians Say It Is a Last Resort—Sultan Must Choose Between Peril And Autonomy—Operated On While Hypnotized.

London, June 6.—A dispatch to the Daily News from Sofia, reiterates the story published a few days ago by the "News," that the Macedonian revolutionary leaders threaten to use Indian plague bacilli to cause an outbreak of that disease if their demands are not conceded. The inception of this plan is due to Boris Sarafof, the notorious Macedonian leader. The correspondent says that the threat will certainly be carried out within a few days after the rebel chiefs issue a final warning. The Sopsiska Vedomosti, a newspaper published in Sofia, which supports the Macedonian cause, says that a supply of bubonic bacilli, sufficient to spread death and panic in Constantinople, Salonica, and many other places, has been in readiness for a long time. The paper frankly admits that it cannot answer the question of how the Macedonians, who fight for freedom and civilization, can reconcile the scheme of spreading the plague with the feelings of common humanity, and says: "We can only say that the new plan is the last resource of the Macedonians. It is the expedient of despair. In despair, extreme measures, even if the consequences be anarchy, are natural. The sultan still has time to choose between the last peril and autonomy."

The Daily Express relates what it describes as the first instance in England of hypnotic suggestion taking the place of an anaesthetic in a serious surgical operation. A woman thirty-eight years old was suffering from a severely ulcerated leg, and it was decided that her life could be saved only by the amputation of the limb. She desired to be hypnotized for the operation, dreading the use of chloroform, which, it was believed, would have been dangerous in her case. Experimental tests on several successive days having proved satisfactory, the operation was performed on Wednesday. While it was in progress the patient chatted with the nurse and drank wine, and to an ordinary observer appeared to be conscious the whole time. Nevertheless, the operation was painless, and she was unaware of what was passing. The operation was successful in every way.

SPORTS IN GENERAL.

Notes About the Various Sporting Fields.

The Fergus, Ont., lacrosse team plays the Crescents in New York this afternoon.

Arrangements are already under way for transferring the Rochester Eastern baseball league franchise to Montreal.

McGuire, Kennedy and Winchester, of the Belleville hockey team are playing with the lacrosse team of that town.

David Smith, of Carnoustie, Scotland, has been secured as professional by the Metropolitan and Outremont Golf Clubs.

The St. Catharines Lawn Bowling club is making extensive preparations for its first annual tournament on June 24th and following days.

Twenty-four balls were used in a recent baseball match between the Athletics and Washingtons, at Philadelphia. When a ball strikes in either of the bleachers it is never returned.

The Ottawa Rowing club will send a four, a double and a single to the Canadian Association of Amateur Oarsmen's regatta at St. Catharines, providing suitable rates can be secured. The cost of transporting shells is high and unless a rebate on the regular rate can be obtained, the club will be compelled to keep its would-be champions at home.

The promoters of the proposed turf club in Ottawa, have been meeting with success in obtaining subscriptions of stock from Ottawa gentlemen, and are now seeking to obtain the support of prominent supporters of the tracks in other cities. Without the assistance of western horsemen the project is likely to fall through.

There is trouble in the Quebec provincial baseball league. The majority of the clubs are not satisfied with their receipts. It is claimed that the Mascotte club, with all its advantages of a fine ground and being right in Montreal, is the only one that makes money, and that the other clubs are unable to exist on their own earning without assistance. A new percentage plan is to be adopted if the league is to continue to exist.

Where are the senior lacrosse teams now playing in Montreal to be recruited from? asks the Herald. That is the question the lovers of the national game must face and must answer quickly, if lacrosse is not to die away in this city. Like Queen's of old, Montreal has been depending year after year upon her old players to win championships. Then the time comes when they can no longer take the field, and there are no "understudies."

Ottawa Citizen: Ten thousand people cheered a Brantford lacrosse team that hadn't a native of Brantford as a member. What would those 10,000 do if team were made up of Brantford boys. The Telephone City's line-up comes from the ends of the earth.

Hayden and Castro of the Rochester baseball club were offered to the Baltimore club for $1,500. It appears the Rochester magnates intend to wreck their team before transferring the franchise to Montreal.

The people of Ontario and Montreal will heave a sigh of relief when the name Albert Dade disappears from the newspapers. For the past two months, he has been more prominent in news circles than any other man in Canada. Dade is a lacrosse player, one of the roving kind, and his movements have been daily noted, and conjectures made as to where he will play. Now he has gone to Brantford, if he could only be induced to take a trip to Belleville, his rovings would be over, and we would gladly help to write a few things upon his tombstone.

Montreal Witness: The Quebec Rugby Football Union is threatened. It may surprise lovers of the game in this city to learn that there is a possibility in the near future of the different local clubs withdrawing from the union in order to form a new association in favor of English rugby rules. It is a well known fact, among rugby football men, especially those resident in Montreal and district, that there is a growing feeling of irritation against the Canadian rules, as played in the Quebec union, and it is this fact that has led up to the clubs discussing their withdrawal from the football arena, in favor of the English game.

The Toronto Telegram is weeping tears of lemon juice over the decline of sport in Kingston. It certainly must be admitted that there has as yet been no activity here in summer sports. However, it is not Kingston's fault that no baseball league was formed. The distance within a radius of fifty miles is responsible for that. The proposed association football and intermediate lacrosse leagues for this district are still in abeyance, while the summer's yacht races do not begin for another week. No active work has yet occured among the bowling and golf clubs, and cricket is as dead here as the atmosphere of Belleville. Is it any wonder then that the Telegram man has taken to the drink!

The Flirt.

Kate Masterson, in Life.

There are chaps that they sit next to
one at dinners,
And boys that in the German take you out.
There are silver-haired and also hairless sinners
Whom you always meet at any lively bout;
The lads that like to get you in a corner
And spoon through all the dances on the stair,
And those with sugar plums like Jacky
Horner,
And the naughty ones who never take a care!

But when you meet a person ordinary,
Serious — a white gardenia in his coat—
Who looks the other way in manner wary
And doesn't seem your presence quite
to note,
Whose eyes smile rather as though you amuse him—
As if, in fact, he thought he had you pat—
What ripping fun—to win him—then refuse him!
Oh, how one hates a man who acts like that!

WORLD TIDINGS.

OCCURRANCS RECOUNTED IN BRIEF FORM.

Despatches and Cullings Telling of Events Transpiring in All Parts of the Earth.

The debate on the adoption or rejection of the report of the Gamey commission will commence on Tuesday.

At Toronto this afternoon the Canadian militia veterans decorated the monuments of their fallen comrades of 1866 and 1885.

The corporation laborers in Chatham, Ont., are on strike. They have been receiving $1.50 per day of ten hours and demand the same wage for a nine hour day.

Brown & Co., Clyde Bank, and Hunter, Newcastle, have each secured a contract for the construction of one of the giant steamships to be built for the Cunard line.

The Sir John A. Macdonald monument in Toronto was decorated with flowers this afternoon. Sir Mackenzie Bowell, Hon. F. D. Monk and Hon. Dr. Montague spoke.

Premier Ross states that the government has no intention to take any action against Mr. Gamey. The usual course for a member in Mr. Gamey's position was to resign.

The body of a woman, who disappeared from a Lackawanna train, one mile east of Lounsbery, N.Y., was discovered on the track Saturday morning. It proved to be that of the mother of the Rev. Pascal Russomando, an Italian priest of Erie, Pa., who was returning from the east with her.

Lake Ontario Park will be opened on Monday next for the summer. Great improvements have been made to the park during the past two months. Two hundred new incandescent and a number of arc lamps have been placed through the park, making it bright and attractive. The pavilion has been enlarged and now has a seating capacity of seven hundred. A high class vaudeville company will begin a week's engagement on Monday evening, including some of the best talent playing this week in Toronto and Buffalo, presenting comedy, novelty acts, character change artists, singers, acrobatic and other dances.

English As 'Tis Spoken.

Exchange.

"When the English tongue we speak
Why is 'break' not rhymed with 'freak'?
Will you tell me why it's true
We say 'sew,' but likewise 'few';
And the maker of a verse
Cannot cap his 'horse' with 'worse'?
'Cord' is different from 'word';
'Beard' sounds not the same as 'heard.'
'Cow' is cow, but 'low' is low;
'Shoe' is never rhymed with 'foe.'
Think of 'hose' and 'dose' and 'lose';
And of 'goose'—and yet of 'choose.'
Think of 'comb' and 'tomb' and 'bomb';
'Doll' and 'roll'; and 'home' and 'some.'
And since 'pay' is rhymed with 'say,'
Why not 'paid' with 'said,' I pray?
We have 'blood' and 'food' and 'good';
'Mould' is not pronounced like 'could.'
Wherefore 'done,' but 'gone' and 'lone'?
Is there any reason known?
And, in short, it seems to me
Sounds and letters disagree."

Non-Smokers In The Cabinet.

The recent parliamentary discussion of the cigarette question brought out the fact that the following members of the Dominion cabinet do not use the weed in any form: Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Messrs. Fielding, Mulock, Scott, Fisher, Fitzpatrick, Cartwright, and the late minister of public works, Mr. Tarte. Hon. Mr. Borden might also be put in the same class, because he very rarely uses tobacco in any form. Surely this is a credible showing for public men.

The City Will Fight It.

The county council took no further action regarding the subway question. This means that the matter will be pressed and that the exchequer court will next week be asked to make the privy council railway committee's finding operative. The city solicitor will oppose the attempt, for the city is bound not to be forced to pay $6,000 for helping to build a road outside Kingston's limits.

Grave Not Decorated.

To-day is the twelfth anniversary of the death of Sir John A. Macdonald. It was the custom of the Kingston conservative association and Macdonald club to decorate the grave of the great Canadian statesman in Cataraqui cemetery, but this year the day has evidently been forgotten, for no decoration arrangements have been made.

BIRD ARCHITECTURE.

The Titmouse is Earliest Builder In England.

With the exception perhaps of the missel thrush, the raven, and an owl or two, the long-tailed titmouse, or bottle-tit, is, I believe, about the earliest of English nesting birds.

I watched two pairs of long-tailed titmice building on March 15 and 16. Once you know the ways of these little creatures and their haunts, it is easy to find a nest or two before the leaf is out. A sure sign that there is a nest at hand is vociferousness. Such fuss and chatter even among the fussy family of titmice are rare.

Of the two nests I found, one is in a whitethorn, about three feet from the ground; the other in a spruce fir, at about the same height—rather low for the species.

The nest in the spruce fir is practically pendent, like a gold crest's. It rests on no stable basis, and is simply kept in place when the wind roughly rocks the bough to and fro by the perfectly skillful way in which the birds have attached it to the drooping fir twigs. It is glued, as it were to these twigs here and there all round, at the top, the bottom, and the sides.

Unfortunately I was not able to get near enough to watch the birds attaching this nest to the twigs. But I was lucky in seeing a good deal of the way in which the nest in the whitethorn bush at the edge of the coppice was built.

And first let me say that the nests of all the long-tailed titmice I can recollect at this moment have always had entrances facing south or south-west or west—but I think a southerly aspect is much more common than a westerly. I cannot recall finding a nest facing north or east, though I do not want for a moment to lay down a general rule and say that these birds never build nests facing either of those quarters.

Bird Sharers of Labor.

The whitethorn nest, when first I noticed it, was about a quarter built, and it closely resembled a chaffinch's in position, material, and shape. A bird-nesting boy with me said "Chaffinch." But I felt sure it was a titmouse's, and lying flat down, about three yards off, I watched and waited.

Presently the tits arrived, sure enough. One had its beak full of lichens. It chattered all the while, saw me, and flew a little way off. The other did likewise. I waited quite still, and presently was rewarded. One of the birds, the hen, I believe, flew into the bush and entered the nest.

At first its movements within the nest seemed to me delicate and gingerly, as if much action would do harm to the structure. But upon the next visit of the bird I noticed a display of considerable vigor. The little creature rummaged about in the nest, tail (which was pushed upward, of course), body and head all going hard.

While the beak built up the sides, the body, unless I am very much mistaken, was all the while molding and pressing the inside of the nest. It was curious to notice the way in which the builder worked its way round and round the nest, touching up now one side, now another.

Once, to my joy, I saw it drag a scrap of material off the edge of one side of the nest and place this elsewhere. As a result of this method of building, the sides grow up quite level. I was so delightfully near that I could see the tiny beak pushing and weaving and pressing the building materials together with intense energy.

Both birds built. The cock long-tailed titmouse does not merely attend the hen and encourage her, as the cock linnet or the cock tree-creeper does. He works with a will himself. Is it because the nest is such a long and difficult undertaking that he shares the labors, or is the long and difficult nest the result merely of this energy on the part of both hen and cock?

A minute inventory of the nest, so far as it had gone, showed that the following materials were in use: Moist moss, small tree lichens, flattish, green-gray on the upper, and dark, boot-leather brown on the under side; silk from the cocoons of some insects, cobwebs, one feather (worked into the side; the great mass of feathers used for lining are not laid in till the nest has been domed over), some tiny strips of thinnest birch bark; some very fine, dried grasses.

As the birds flew about their home they looked like scraps of wind-borne fluff. "Exquisite" is a poor word with which to describe them. It makes one tingle with pleasure to watch.—Correspondence of London Express.

Origin of "Budget."

It is difficult to realize that the term "budget," now so often in every one's mouth, is a term less than 200 years old, the earliest mention of the word dating no further back than 1733. We borrowed it from the old French language—bougette, meaning a small bag, in which in former times it was the custom to put the estimates of receipts and expenditures when presented to Parliament. Hence the Chancellor of the Exchequer, in making his annual statement, was formerly said to open his budget. In time the term passed from the receptacle to the contents, and, curiously, this new signification was returned from this country to France, where it was first used in an official manner in the early part of the nineteenth century. —London Chronicle.

A POOR CASE

Argued by a good lawyer will win, some people say, when a good case in the hands of a poor lawyer would fail.

In the case of selling our shoes the evidence is so plain and direct that a salesperson does not need any ability other than to tell the truth in order to win.

Customers can see for themselves the good points in our shoes, and reach a favorable conclusion without the aid of argument.

And moreover, time will prove to them that they have made no mistake because the satisfactory services of the shoes will still further confirm their good judgment.
