THE NEW YORK STRIKE. A Former Kingstonian Writes Concerning It.

New York, June 13.—(To the Editor) I see in the Kingston papers that 100,000 men are on strike in this city. There are 10,000 carpenters on strike, or rather there are 10,000 locked out. In fact, there are 120,000 men locked out in the building trades.

The trouble started by the brotherhood of carpenters striking against the amalgamated society of carpenters. If the builders employed the amalgamated, they would not work.

The bosses did not want the brotherhood, as they had signed a contract for two years and broken it in six months. The board of building trades took into their association the Team Drivers' Union, which struck for more pay and shorter hours.

The union said if the lumbermen hired "scabs" to deliver their lumber the unions would not use it; so the lumbermen locked up their yards and would not deliver any material.

The board of building trades fought it out for four weeks, and then the mechanics left the streets and started a new board with only skilled mechanics. The lumbermen and other building material furnishers opened up business, but the builders thought they had a chance to kick. They say they will not go on with the work until the unions do away with the walking delegates, declaring, with some reason, that the delegate wants to run the business.

The delegate has power to call the men off any job when he thinks he has a reason. The builders say the delegate calls on a strike and then goes to the builder and offers to put the men on to work again for a sum ranging from $100 to $5,000, and they have been getting it for years. The men lose their time, and time is money. The men have a chance to kick. They say they will not go on with the work until the unions do away with the walking delegates, declaring, with some reason, that the delegate wants to run the business.
