MACLEAN DEAD.

FOR YEARS HEAD OF MEDICAL PROFESSION.

Those Strong, Ambidextrous Hands That Earned the Gratitude of Thousands, Are Still Doctor Was Sixty-four Years Old.

Detroit Journal.

Dr. Donald Maclean, for many years at the head of the medical profession in the state of Michigan and one of the famous surgeons of the country, expired at 9.50 a.m. at his residence, 821 Woodward avenue, on Friday.

The immediate cause of death is described as gastro-enteritis, and inflammation of the stomach and lower digestive organs. The doctor had been ill for two or three weeks, but the disease did not assume an acute form until about three days ago.

Dr. Hallin, who has been associated much with Dr. Maclean during many years, attended him during his illness, and on Thursday evening called Drs. Flinterman, Anderson, and Winters into consultation with him. Thursday night Dr. Maclean's only daughter, the wife of Dr. Alexander M. Campbell, of Grand Rapids, arrived with her husband.

The dying physician was unconscious during the last twenty-four hours of his life, but when his daughter entered his room at 11 p.m., she was recognized.

"Do you know who this is?" she asked.

"Annie Maclean," the sick man answered, when he heard his daughter's voice. That was the last sign of outward knowledge, as the comatose condition became more and more pronounced. He suffered almost no pain towards the last. His death was very peaceful, and after death the face wore an expression of calm repose. Among those at his bedside when he expired were Mrs. Maclean, Dr. and Mrs. Campbell, Dr. Hallin, and the nurse.

A son of the family, Dr. Donald Maclean, Jr., resides in the west, and although summoned, did not arrive before death ensued.

The doctor's aged mother, who is still living at Kingston, Ont., near where the doctor was born, is too enfeebled to be present, even at the funeral. Dr. Maclean leaves several brothers and sisters. Brothers are practicing at Salt Lake City, Leadville, and Hancock, Mich.

Donald Maclean was born in Seymour, Ont., December 14, 1859. His father was Charles Maclean, the son of an famous Edinburgh attorney. At the age of six years he went to Edinburgh with his father, returning to Canada six years later. Thus a part of his early education was obtained in Scotland and a part in Canada. He studied in the literary department of Queen's University, Kingston, and taught school for some years before returning to Edinburgh in 1888, to which the study of medicine and surgery in the Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons. From this institution he was graduated with great honor on August 1st, 1862.

The next year he began his American career as a surgeon in the United States army, and after the war stayed for a time in Louisville, Ky. He practiced medicine in Kingston, where he was also a professor in the university. He was already gaining prominence as a surgeon in days when surgeons were few, and in 1872, through Dr. David O. Farrand of Detroit, he secured the position of professor of surgery at Ann Arbor. Here he remained seventeen years.

While at Ann Arbor his skill as a practitioner grew. Wonderful stories are told of his skill and judgment, his strong sympathies and the tireless, amiable work of his wonderful hands. Years ago a grandstand fell at Adrian at a county fair, and Dr. Maclean grew from Ann Arbor and by his promptness, his genius and his unswerving devotion to his task, greatly alleviated the effects of the disaster, so far as the wounded and unfortunate were concerned. He became surgeon-in-chief of several railroads, and in the midst of the great wreck near Jackson in 1894, he worked thirty-six hours with amazing speed and marvellous skill. During his last years at Ann Arbor and after he left Ann Arbor, he was called to all parts of the country to perform delicate and dangerous operations. He practiced in every state in the union and the fame of his work went abroad.

In 1899 Dr. Maclean resigned his position at Ann Arbor. He had contended for the regular practice, and had always insisted that the medical department of the university should be transferred to Detroit, for larger practical work. These views caused contention.

The doctor then removed to Detroit, where he has since resided, being engaged in general practice.

gaged in general practice up to two years ago, when he retired. His reputation still grew during his retirement. In 1894 the American Medical Association elected him president, the highest honor which the profession in America can confer upon a member. Queen's University, in Kingston, honored him with the degree of LL.D. in 1895, and the Royal College of Physicians in London conferred upon him the degree of F.R.C.S. in 1895. He was also a member of the London Royal College of Surgeons (L.R.C.S.) and a Fellow of the Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons (F.R.C.P.S.).

In 1887 he was associated with Prof. Hayes, a famous Scottish surgeon, in his great work on general surgery. Dr. Maclean contributed largely to professional periodicals, and was a clear, forcible writer.

One of the striking traits of his character was his warm sympathy with his people and with young practitioners in general. In their behalf he planned to prohibit the use of a physician's name in a newspaper. He had every reason to be proud of many of his pupils. Among well-known local physicians who studied under him are Drs. W. F. Metcalf, A. N. Collins, and F. B. Tibbals, and Dr. W. J. Mayo, of Rochester, N.Y.; Dr. Sullivan, of Chicago, and Dr. Lee, of Lincoln, Neb., pupils of his, who are well-known to the profession in America.

Dr. Maclean is said by members of his profession to have done more work than three ordinary "great doctors." He has doubtless saved literally hundreds of lives, and in all his practice he never, it is said, lost a patient.

He would know each one and remember his ailments twenty years afterwards. He was a surgeon when surgeons were few, and a great surgeon, an interesting worker, and a patient's interest which resulted, after years, in nervous trouble, which affected the digestive organs. His stomach has troubled him for some time.

In 1883 Dr. Maclean was awarded $20,000 in a famous libel suit against a local paper. This is the largest sum of money ever awarded in a suit of this sort, and the case attracted country-wide attention.

Dr. Maclean was twice married. His second wife, who survives him, was formerly a Mrs. Duncan.

Two children, Dr. Donald Maclean, Jr., and Mrs. Campbell, wife of Alexander M. Campbell, of Grand Rapids, also survive him.

There was a large funeral on Sunday last. His remains were cremated as he was an advocate of this method. His ashes, placed in an urn, will be buried in Cataract cemetery.

Mrs. J. C. Paterson, a sister of the deceased, and her mother also lives with Mrs. Paterson.

Country House Grounds.

Caretaker Grant is getting the court house grounds in good condition, after the way they were torn up for the new granolithic walk. The parts around the building have been seeded. From the walk to the roadside it is to be graded, and street scrapings will be used for that purpose. It will be two years before the grounds are perfected. Then the court house property will be one of the most beautiful spots in Canada.

The Rock Island railway has secured control of Evansville and Terre Haute system.

OTTAWA FAIR.

A Great Programme For September's Exhibition.

Exhibits of horses, cattle, sheep, swine, poultry, pigeons and pet stock, agriculture, horticulture, manufactures, ladies and arts exhibits, Central Exhibition Farm exhibit, dairy exhibit. Special side shows on grounds, otherwise known as the midway. Special attractions in front of grand stand, afternoon, Ballroom sessions, Prof. Sutherland's Hippodrome company, including chariot races and Roman standing races. Diable whirling the hoop, the three livingstons, acrobats, the Bounding Patersons, acrobats and aerialists; the Merry Gowns or troupe of musical dancers (25 ladies recently arrived from Europe); a solid business and two sisters, the style of architecture throughout, being almost of a uniformity. It is too bad, however, that the merchants doing business on that block were so short-sighted as to refuse the proposed improvement besides adding greatly to the appearance of the street, would have brought increased business to the Kingston. Bicycles and all persons having occasion to drive on business or pleasure would have bought the street where wheeling was smoothest, and the result would have been a vast increase of trade to the stores within the block. Some of the merchants now realize the mistake they made.

MADE A MISTAKE

And Now Realize It — Street Should Be Asphalted.

The new store just completed for McKelvey & Birch, and into which the two adjoining stores, recently completed, add greatly to the improved appearance of the north side of Brock street, between King and Wellington streets. The entire block now presents a solid business and two sisters, the style of architecture throughout, being almost of a uniformity. It is too bad, however, that the merchants doing business on that block were so short-sighted as to refuse the proposed improvement besides adding greatly to the appearance of the street, would have brought increased business to the Kingston. Bicycles and all persons having occasion to drive on business or pleasure would have bought the street where wheeling was smoothest, and the result would have been a vast increase of trade to the stores within the block. Some of the merchants now realize the mistake they made.

Death of Mrs. Charon.

The death of Mrs. Adolphus Charon, Montreal street, occurred Sunday afternoon after a lingering illness of two years. Her decease, in her own name was Sophia Gariepy, daughter of the late Charles Gariepy, Cornwall. She was married in Loughborough, and afterwards came with her husband to Kingston where she resided for the past thirty-three years. A family of three daughters and two sons survives—Mrs. R. J. Bennett, Mrs. John Agnew, Mrs. Murray, and William of Kingston, and Adolphus of Boston. Surviving also are, mother and two sisters, Mrs. Henry Yedlow and Miss Florence, all in Kingston. The late Mrs. Charon was aged fifty years. She was a member of St. Mary's cathedral congregation. The funeral Wednesday morning was private.

One Of The Oldest.

Capt. R. H. McKay, Filton, N.Y., is another contestant for the honor of being the oldest home-comer. He was born in Kingston on May 29th, 1823, and claims to be the oldest one yet in sight.

William Thompson, Toronto, was another notable Old Boy, who joined in the festivities. He is seventy-five years of age, and was years ago engineer on the old steamer Watertown.

Unsolicited Subscriptions.

The treasurer of the Old Boys' Association, desires to express gratitude to John M. Campbell and George A. Bateman, for unsolicited subscriptions of $5 each, and to a member of the association, in recognition of the indebtedness of the association. Cheering words accompanied the gifts. It is such unexpected appreciation of devoted efforts that gives the workers fresh courage for greater accomplishments.

Here On A Visit.

Alfred H. Landthier, Cleveland, Ohio, licensed lake and river pilot, is in the city for the first time in nine years. He has frequently piloted steamers past this port in the interim, and once stopped at Garden Island for a short time, but never had an opportunity of stopping at Kingston until to-day. He met many old friends along the harbor front.

At The Police Court.

At the police court this morning Patrick McKay, on a charge of drunkenness, was given two months in jail. John Corbett was fined $2 for wheeling his bicycle on the sidewalk.

IN THREE YEARS

QUITE A STRANGE SERIES OF DISASTERS

Family Misfortunes Culminated by a Drowning Accident—Accident That Rendered One an Invalid.

Watertown, N.Y., July 21.—News has just been received at Henderson of the drowning of William Brooks, who last week fell from the steamer Kawsia in Buffalo Harbor. Mr. Brooks was formerly a resident of Henderson and his death is the culminating disaster of a series of family misfortunes. About three years ago Mrs. Brooks met with an accident that rendered her an invalid for life. Then, in the fall of 1891, her two sons, Charles and Sherman, were drowned when the steamer Hudson went down on the upper lakes. In the spring of 1902 the daughter, Edith, who had been her mother's faithful nurse, died. Mr. Brooks leaves a brother, James Brooks, on Galloup Island, and a sister, Mrs. E. B. Gannett, at Sackets Harbor.

OFFICERS' MARRIAGES.

Changes Made in the Regulations.—Money Allowance Made.

The militia department has promulgated the following changes: With the exception of officers appointed prior to July 1st, 1901, officers of the permanent corps below regimental rank of captain will only make commissions so long as they remain unmarried. This rule may be relaxed in case of officers who have completed six years' service in rank of lieutenant on recommendation of officer commanding, who must satisfy himself that the officer's means will enable him to maintain his family in a manner befitting his position as an officer.

An allowance of twelve cents a day in lieu of rations of broom corn, groceries and vegetables will be made to warrant officers, non-commissioned officers and men of the permanent corps such periods as they are actually absent from their unit on leave of absence or furlough exceeding three days. Soldier servants accompanying their masters on leave of absence will be granted the same allowance, provided rations are not drawn.

Just Missed The Pipe.

The schooner John Gilchrist, from Detroit, with grain for the Mall day afternoon, and anchored close to the waterworks' suction pipe. Superintendent Hewitt feared that the pipe would be damaged and notified the schooner captain. During the evening the vessel drifted towards the waterworks' wharf her anchor would have done damage to the pipe. Happily, the anchor did not come within twenty feet of the pipe, and therefore all is well. During the day time mariners have only to use their eyes to see where the water pipe is. Its locality is clearly indicated by the monster sign on the pumping house shed.

Let An Abusive Father.

A Rideau street family left this afternoon for Watertown, N.Y., to escape further ill-treatment from the father of the household. Twice of late, the man parent has put his family out of the house at night, and he continually abused and insulted them. The mother decided that it was better to take her children away, and this afternoon the six of them left to find a happier home across the border, and to earn their own livelihood. One girl is about twenty years of age, and decidedly good-looking.

Says It Is His Property.

This afternoon a few peddlers called at the police station and laid out the pack of goods found on the shore of the Rideau river, in Pittsburg township, by Henry Lebeup. He said the man asleep on the roadside at a point about twenty miles west of Kingston. Upon awakening he found the value missing. The third must have deposited it, where found by Mr. Lebeup. If the claimant can give a satisfactory description of the contents, the value will be handed over to him.

Good Stock.

A. McGuire, Kingston, says that in his experience of over thirty years, dealing in live stock, he has never come across a better herd than the twenty-five steers he purchased on Friday from A. W. Byburn, and for which he paid $1,529.50. These cattle averaged 1,274 pounds, were grazed on Mr. Harbison's farm in Yereville, and are to be put in best at Kingston.

Belonged To Hospital.

The value of table linen found this morning in the yard in rear of the residence of James Weir, Barris street, was later identified as belonging to the General Hospital, but the officers of that institution are at a loss to know how it was removed from the building or by whom. The stuff is in the possession of the police.

Under ordinary conditions the portrait looked all right, but by reversing it, a suggestively indecent picture was presented.
