Very Remarkable Cure of Diarrhoea.

"About six years ago for the first time in my life I had a sudden and severe attack of diarrhoea," says Mrs. Alire Miller, of Morgan, Texas. "I got temporary relief, but it came back again and again, and for six long years I have suffered more misery and agony than I can tell. It was worse than death. My husband spent hundreds of dollars for physicians' prescriptions and treatments without avail. Finally we moved to Bosque county, our present home, and one day I happened to see an advertisement of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy with a testimonial of a man who had been cured by it. The case was so similar to my own that I concluded to try the remedy. The result was wonderful. I could hardly realize that I was well again, or believe it could be so after having suffered so long, but that one bottle of medicine, costing but a few cents, cured me." For sale by all druggists.

A CHANGE MADE.

A General Staff Is Now In Control.

Washington, D.C., Aug. 15.—To-day marks an epoch in the history of the United States army organization. The act creating the general staff, passed at the last session of congress, became operative to-day and many are the important changes that resulted. The most important is the abolishment of the office of commanding-general which has existed from the time of Gen. Washington. Gen. Young, who succeeded to the command of the army on the retirement of Gen. Miles one week ago, relinquishes the position and becomes first chief of the general staff. The other two officers on the general staff who with Gen. Young, are designated as general officers are Gen. Corbin and Carter. In addition to these three officers of high rank the staff consists of forty-two officers ranging from colonels to first lieutenant. Every corps and department is represented except the pay and medical departments.

Gen. Young will retire for age next January, and will be succeeded as chief of staff by Major Gen. Adna R. Chaffee. In the natural course of events Gen. Chaffee will be succeded on his statutory retirement by Gen. Corbin.

CHOICE MODES

NEW CREATIONS FOR FAIR WOMANKIND.

What The Fair Dames May Look For in Autumn Styles—Dainty Gowns For Pretty Women.

New York, Aug. 15.—The distinguishing feature of late summer hats is their trimmings; and these have a two-fold purpose. First they are entirely novel. Second, they foreshadow the ultra-smart decoration for autumn headgear.

While many of the hats of early summer were at once the delight of the woman fashionable and despair of the Audubons, their trimming consisted chiefly of plumes and wings; the season-end models are adorned with flight of the tiniest birds imaginable, perched upon the brims of Major-General S. B. M. Young, who becomes Chief of Staff of United States Army. General William H. Carter, who with Major-General Henry C. Corbin will constitute the general staff, is also shown.

crownless "flats" and spreading Gainsboroughs.

A fashionable model is shown in dark blue and rich green mixed straw. The brim is faced with the two shades of chiffon, shirred and finished along the edge with a tiny ruching of black lace. The brim of the hat turns away sharply at the front and sides, while blue birds with breasts and wings flecked with green and yellow cunningly peep over the edge.

Some of the summer straws in darker tones can be almost entirely transformed by the addition of the newest trimmings. For instance a rolling turban shaped ecru straw hat, which earlier would have been finished with majestic plume trailing across the crown now has a strip of elegant black lace all around it bordered on either edge with a ruching of feathers, so tiny that they might be called pin feathers. At the left side there are grouped several tiny birds with jewelled eyes.

Louisine and peau de soie will probably be among the fashionable materials for hats during the coming season. Both are elegant and can be obtained in inexpensive as well as expensive qualities. A stylish hat in golden brown louisine is a perfectly flat turban, trimmed at regular intervals with brown birds, with pale yellow markings pressed down upon the crown.

The fashionable hat must be either quite dark or very light; there is no compromise. Rich deep browns, blues, greens, purples and reds are ultra-smart or white, pale greys, cream-ecrus and the almond greens.

The boquet revival which has been threatened for some time is likely to be fully developed by thanksgiving. Some of the new straws and summer felts show the design with effective variations of the abbreviated brim adapting it to different faces. There is little difference between the bonnet for young women and elderly matrons, and this little is shown in the brim which is slightly wider for the former.

Nothing could be more effective than a large pearl grey plateau hat designed to accompany an afternoon toilette in the same shade of crepe de chine. The crown is a tiny bell-like affair trimmed entirely with a wreath of marabaut feathers and underneath the brim at the back there are dainty pom poms of the feathers combined with a row of shaded grey velvet ribbon. The gown is trimmed with lace and chenille embroidery. The skirt fits without fullness over the hips, with infinitesimal tucks running down to where a deep, full flounce finishes the bottom. This flounce is headed by a band of embroidered lace insertion and falls very full and long over the feet, with a demi-train at the back.

The bodice is composed of a series of tucks, alternated with strips of lace, with the opening arranged at the back. The front is full enough to retain the graceful outline, but there is an absence of the pronounced bloused effect. A sash of pale grey chiffon confines the waist and is tied in a knot at the back and allowed to fall to the floor in sweeping ends. The neck is finished with a stock of embroidered insertion, with a chou of chiffon tied at the back. The sleeves fit close to the elbow, and are composed of the tucked crepe de chine and embroidered lace.

The straw sailor has not been in great demand this year, principally because at the beginning of the season a rather flashy design was introduced that was so quickly adopted by the many as to make it undesirable for the seekers of novelty. There are to be found some very natty shapes appropriate for street and semi-dress wear, however, carried out in dark straws, linen braids and various natty cloths. The plainer designs may be smartened up by means of a twist of soft ribbon or foulard knotted into a large bow, while a still dressier effect is obtainable by the addition of a wing or flock of small birds. It should be remembered with regard to ribbons and bows on millinery that the bows do not flop; the loops are finely plisse to give them stiffness and very few have ends—that is, visible ends. Bands will not be de rigeur on autumn hats, in their stead will be ruchings and twists with buckles of steel, French silver or jet.

Etamine, it is announced, will be as popular for early fall as it has been during summer. This is due to the glad fact that, though highly favored, it did not become common. Cheap etamine is intolerable, being heavy and scratchy and women buying etamine frocks as a rule have selected only the fine qualities.

A simple yet charming design in this fabric is made with only a deep pointed white collar of Russian lace coming round the front of the bodice and round to the back, having the effect of a pointed yoke, with cuffs on the sleeves to match.

The skirt is close fitting and flares very much round the bottom, with each seam strapped by a bias band of taffeta. The bodice has a few straps down the front and in the back, giving it a tucked effect. It buttons up the back and blouses over a belt of taffeta at the front.

Canvas cloth is a new fabric seeking the favor of fashion's disciples. As its name suggests, it is rather a combination of materials, for while it has a rather open-work effect, the finish is high and at a distance looks quite like one of the satin-faced cloths. It is made upon lines adopted for voiles, mistral cloth, and the like, however.

An effective dress is twine-color canvas cloth, showing a full skirt having a band of wool embroidery, in Oriental tones, let in about two inches above the hem.

The bodice has the long shoulder effect, produced in a sort of crepe bretelles that come down over the slightly loose, full front and cross over to slip one end under the belt at the left side. The whole is trimmed with a narrow band of the embroidery.

Shirt waists of wash materials will be worn quite late, and probably throughout the winter by the woman who goes to business. New designs, however, will be used in their construction. All the advance models show the yoke effect, some extending down over the shoulder; others showing the conventional tailored idea.

It is far more satisfactory to purchase these waists already made, for unless cut and fitted by a first-class dressmaker they are sure to bag about the arm-holes and present a sloppy appearance in general. All things considered, they are just as cheap. The smart materials range from fifty cents to a dollar and a half a yard. Two and a half yards at least are required, and the stores sell the waists at only a slight advance over the cost of the material; then there is the satisfaction of wearing something that can stand the scrutinizing eye of critical womankind.

New gowns in thin materials are not displayed in great numbers now, except for evening wear; the designs that remain, however, are full of glory and altogether lovely. The woman who buys now secures her treasures at tempting bargains and has yet ample time to show them to advantage.

Hot Weather Beauty

The fresh bloom and beauty which is so attractive in women—the beauty of perfect health—falls an easy victim to the enervating heat of summer. The roses fade and a sickly pallor takes its place; nervous headaches leave dark shadows beneath the eyes; the eyes themselves lose their sparkle and lustre; rashes and blotches destroy the fine texture of the skin and almost without warning beauty has fled.

These troubles are but outward manifestations of the effect of hot weather upon the digestive system. With perfect digestion beauty can defy the heat.

"Nerves" lassitude, loss of appetite and the hundred and one troubles that make hot weather almost unbearable are unknown to the person with a sound digestion.

Before beauty has fled; before "nerves," headaches, indigestion, constipation and listlessness overtake you, buy a little box of

IRON-OX

Tiny Tonic Tablets

With them you can defy the heat, escape rashes and blotches, retain your appetite, preserve the roses in your cheeks, or make them bloom where they never bloomed before.

Iron-Ox Tiny Tablets are the best tonic for women and children. Best because they are dainty and gentle. Not a harsh purgative but a safe tonic-laxative. Pleasant to take—very certain in their effect.
