A FINE LECTURE. "The Spiritual Side of the Teachers' Work."

Principal Gordon, of Queen's, spoke on Thursday night before the East Leeds Teachers' Association in Brockville, on the above topic. The Times says: "Dr. Gordon lost little time in plunging into his subject. After stating that he fully realized the great influence in this part of Canada of the late Principal Grant and the difficulties of any man who followed in his place, he expressed his regret that the spiritual side of teaching was so little regarded in these days. Teachers followed too much in the beaten path of the curriculum, and should be given leave to impress their individuality upon the pupil. The system and the subject were not really as important as the individual teacher. For example: A boy is brought to a teacher for instruction. He is duly taught the elementary studies; he advances and passes his examinations in the course of time satisfactorily. But is all done that should be done? No. More important still is the direction in which the character has been turned, and the influences which have been inseparably moulding his inclinations."
