GRATITUDE TO LORENZ.

Armour, of Chicago, whose daughter was helped into health by Dr. Lorenz, of Vienna, is so grateful that he is going to found several orthopedic institutes in the United States and Canada.

THE PRICE OF BREAD.

Prof. Adam Shortt, of the Political Science department of Queen's College, has written an admirable sketch of municipal government in Ontario.

Glancing over the pages of this chapter, which describes the transition of government from its earliest exercises through the Court of Quarter Sessions until it reached the council, from indirect to direct representation of the people, one sees some curious things.

That law has been repealed and replaced by a law that is not nearly so effective. There is a by-law which is supposed to govern the bread trade, and it is either inoperative or non-effective, seeing there is so much dissatisfaction with both the weight and price of bread at the present time.

ROCKEFELLER ON RELIGION.

John D. Rockefeller is just now subject to a great deal of facetious criticism because of a remark he made to his pastor, Dr. Eaton, in the Euclid Avenue Baptist church, Cleveland, on Sunday evening.

He said—inspired by something that he made him shudder to think of what he missed by being removed, when a small boy, from Richmond, N.Y., a godless place, to where he saw religious people and realized what religion meant.

"There are so many men who hunt a 'fifth,'" said Mr. Rockefeller, "fish a little, and drink whiskey a little, and only attain a little success in life, and all for the lack of a little religion."

The inference is that Mr. Rockefeller caught the religious spirit when young, that it softened and mellowed his experience, and that but for it the world would have suffered more than it has done at the hands of the Standard Oil Trust.

And yet there was not so much that is fortuitous about Mr. Rockefeller's career. He was an industrious, a thoughtful, and a sober young man. He cultivated thrift. He was successful in business. He has become one of the richest men in the world by work.

He has given away millions to charity, to education, to religion. He might have given more without feeling it much. He might have had less to distribute had the trust of which he is the head been less exacting. He is not popularly regarded by some people, and he is gratefully regarded by others.

All his plans of getting wealth may not be worthy of imitation, but there is an inspiration in his life, and it is what he is because he was carefully moulded in youth and began his career with the virtues that accompany or flow from religion. He may be criticised for some things, but not for his identification with religious people. The best that is in him he got from them.

ABUSE OF PRIVILEGES.

Parliament has been asked to enquire into the nature of certain petitions that have been presented against the Grand Trunk Pacific railway.

Mr. Talbot, in the commons, said he had made inquiries into two of the petitions, those from Cape St. Ignace and Berthier en bas, in the province of Quebec, and had found out that they contained the names of people living in the United States, of people dead for years, of people in lunatic asylums, of people so advanced in age as to be irresponsible, and of people who had positively refused to sign when asked to do so.

Mr. McCarthy (Selkirk), said that the Winnipeg petitions had been signed in a bar-room, the price being a glass of beer and a cigar. They bore no names of men known either in business or labor, and some signed as residents of Kansas City and Dakota.

In the senate Mr. Doran called attention to the alleged irregularities in regard to the petitions, and asked if the members who presented them should not, in some measure, be accountable for them. The speaker noted that the members could not very well be held responsible for the petitions and their contents, but if it could be shown that forgery had occurred it would be constituted a breach of the privileges of the house and punishment could be inflicted on the guilty persons.

Perhaps it is unfair to assume that all of these petitions have been loosely signed, but there is no doubt that they have been circulated without much regard to care and that names have been written on them indifferently and regardless of effect.

The end has not yet been heard of the trip of the Scotch curlers to Niagara Falls on Sunday. Dr. Kerr, who led the party, in Canada, is hearing about it still and in the form of very sharp epistolary correspondence.

Mr. Haycock, before the committee on Agriculture and Colonization, estimated that the farmers had been saved $275,000 by the enforcement of the binder twine act. And yet some people regarded his appointment very lightly.

Mr. Chamberlain is accompanied by his wife on his stumping tour. She sees that he is cared for and saved from endless worry, while resting between his speeches. She is imitating in this respect the attentions of the late Mrs. Disraeli and Mrs. Gladstone.

The Hamilton Spectator asks if Kingston has not a Y.M.C.A. which the young men can patronize? The Whig talked of a resort for poor boys. The Y.M.C.A. costs money for membership and it is the welfare of those that have not the money that gives some people worry.

Women are in the great majority among the students of the Ontario Normal College. This points to an increase in the number of women who will be eventually finding employment in the secondary schools. The men are ceasing to qualify for high school work. It does not pay.

J. S. Ross, of Walkerton, a governor of the Wesleyan College, denies that the case of Dr. Workman was fully discussed, and that the board took the position which has been credited by the press. It was said that the objection of one man could be answered, "but they were not answered." The vote was pressed. Strange proceedings!

Catarrh Poisons The System.

Lowers health and vitality, destroys digestion and makes the victim feel like thirty cents. Foolish, nay criminal, to have Catarrh and suffer its evil consequences since Catarrhism so quickly and pleasantly cures the lungs, throat and nasal passages, by the air you breathe. It is an absolute in its power of curing as it is scientific in its method of treatment.

All his plans of getting wealth may not be worthy of imitation, but there is an inspiration in his life, and it is what he is because he was carefully

ONTONEW YORK

FROM JAIL TO MILLIONS

DOWIE'S ASCENT

Not Many Years Ago He Was a Tasmania Convict, Now He Rules a Host.

Chicago, Oct. 9.—On October 15th, Zion's host of crusaders will be on their way to New York. The past twenty-four hours has been utilized in packing literature into the cars, which will transport it east, and the literature will await the host's arrival in New York. Small maps of New York city have been passed out, with printed guides.

The guide shows the distance and location of each district, from Madison Square Garden, the prevailing nationality of its residents, whether rich or poor, and also whether the district is thickly or sparsely settled.

Here and there in Zion City at all hours of the day may be seen Dowie, with maps and guides in his hands, quizzing each other to see if they have learned their lessons.

"Zion is built upon assets of $23,000,000, and financial storms will never wreck its firm foundations." Dowie once made this statement in response to the fire of criticism which hoped to wreck his financial standing.

JOHN ALEXANDER DOWIE.

Whether he was worth that amount when the statement was made is a little over a year ago, only Dowie himself knew. How much his wealth has increased since that time Dowie only knows, and since the financial world has become rather firmly convinced of his financial strength, and since criticism has taken other avenues of attack, this wonderful man is not likely to tell.

One fact shines out alone and indisputably—Dowie's wealth is the wealth of Zion, for Dowie is Zion, and is to be measured by the most conservative only in the millions.

This from a man who scarcely fifteen years ago landed in this country fresh from an Australian prison with less than $100 in his pocket, is an adequate theme for a romantic novel.

Against a united press, in despite of opposition frankly amounting to persecution from city and state authorities, in face of atrocious indignation, mingled with vituperative hate, Dowie has built up his Zion.

Every dollar that belongs to the Zion City corporation is in his name and subject to his sole order, every inch of ground and foot of building has been deeded personally to him; even the sums which his followers deposit in unknown quantities in his Zion are Dowie's to do with as he pleases.

This is what makes it so hard for the most energetic tax assessor to gain even an inkling of the proportion of Dowie's wealth or of his fervor.

Here is a succinct story of how the followers of Dowie have made of him a millionaire: 1888—Dowie released from short term in Tasmania; lands in San Francisco with $100.

1890—Came to Chicago; says he had $200. 1892-3—Preached in a one-story frame building at Stone Island avenue and Sixty-second street; value nominal.

1900—Owned Zion Home, at Michigan avenue and Twelfth street, worth $50,000; stone building at Michigan avenue and Fourteenth street, used as Zion bank and printing establishment, $10,000; Zion Tabernacle College, Juvenile School, home for working girls, bakeries, shoe shops, stores, etc., scattered along Michigan avenue, $500,000; ten thousand acres of land in Lake County, Ill., to be used as the site for Zion City and farms for believers, $1,250,000; two hundred and twenty acres bought from North Waukegan Harbor and Dock Association; deposits in Zion bank, $300,000.

1901—Owned personal property, stocks, bonds, jewels, etc., valued at $2,500,000. 1905—Increased value Lake County land holdings, $1,000,000; Zion Land and Investment Association, $101,000; Zion lace industries, $196,000; Zion general stores, $93,000; Zion City bank, $300,000; other Zion City industries, $100,000. Increase in personal property, etc., $2,000,000. Total, $8,550,000.

THE CURFEW FOR EVER.

Sayings And Comments By Captain Chartrand.

The full strength of our club phalanx were there in the snug smoking room.

The nauseous Egyptian cigarette, the delicate perfumed home-made cigar, the refined scented Havana, that good all-around implement, the pipe, were gleefully mingling their smokes, which floated softly around the electric luminaries or caressing the ceiling.

The conversation was tremendously interesting as usual. The witty, shaming and smooth-faced barrister had given out some of his most pointed sayings and decisions; the bright old gentleman, with the sweet tenor voice, had wondered why the Royal Military cadets and the Queen's students, always so eagerly agree to have their sports on the same day; the collector of peculiar scores had elaborately described the wonders of one of the latest rubbers; the good humoured banker had just narrated one of the thrilling and long-winded tales of which he has the monopoly.

Then there was a silence. It was the laborious moment of the formation of bridge tables. Already some clever manoeuvres were slightly sketched here and there. A final engagement was soon to take place, when the moral crank unctuously slipped in. And with him came an atmosphere of sanctimoniousness.

And then the curfew began to ring. At that very instant the room seemed to overflow with good conduct and morality. The solemn din of the municipal bell sang out good behaviour all over town and came to our ears as a herald of righteousness. It was a dramatic moment. And then the curfew ceased to tell.

But the moral crank had been looking at his watch and exclaimed: "Only one minute and a half! Who is the corporation functionary, who rings that bell? I will report him to the mayor for gross neglect of his duty. According to the by-law of the curfew, the bell shall be rung for ten minutes. Eight minutes and a half stolen from the by-law. It's unbearably, I would like to know if the municipal employee, to whom incumbers the duty to call our city to the sense of evening discipline, is, yes or no, ashamed to ring that curfew bell the space of time proscribed by the by-law? We have a by-law, by which little children under fifteen years of age are never seen loitering in the streets after nine, but are all at home under the watchful eyes of their parents, and I will enforce that by-law for I am an honest citizen. That bell should ring ten minutes and it shall ring ten minutes, or else I have no blood in my veins, no spunk in my character. I am going to see the mayor immediately!"

And aft flew the moral crank, forgetting his umbrella, in the hurry of his fervor.

We glanced at each other and smiled an entire approval of the crank's words and actions.

But, in the meanwhile, some one, several had smoked out of the room, and when the crank was gone, it was found out that all the bridge tables were in full strength and activity. The divers affinities had come in contact and grouped together.

All this owing to the curfew. And there are people who want to suppress this delicious curfew. Pshaw!
