THE N. W POLICE

INTERESTING TALES OF THE EARLY DAYS.

Indians Increasing in Number and Wealth—Red Indians of Plains Most Formidable Savages on Earth.

St. Paul Star.

In 1874 the Blackfoot nation had camped upon the Cypress hills, and from that eyrie their warriors kept watch upon the Canadian plains. Far to the eastward they saw the smoke of the campfires at dusk, and day by day the herds of buffalo disturbed while scouts rode in reporting a new tribe of the Long Knives, the American cavalry, on the war-path, rapidly advancing. The Blackfeet sent their women to the rear, painted for war, performed the solemnities of the war dance, appealing to the Almighty for aid in battle, they set their ambush ready, while they watched the enemy—vedettes, advance-guard, transport, rear-guard—winding like a little snake over the waves of the golden grass. Could these be Long Knives? The strangers had no "long-out." Then it was seen that they were red coats—so they belonged to the Hudson Bay tribe. That scarlet coat worn by a Hudson Bay company's officer when he sat in judgment was known to all the Red Indians as the symbol of stainless honor and of fearless justice. Because of the sign of the scarlet coat the terrible Blackfoot nation came out of ambush and gave a brotherly welcome to the Northwest Mounted Police.

The Hudson's Bay Company had ceded all Rupert's Land, two million square miles or so, to the Canadian Dominion. The government hardly knew how to enter upon and occupy so gigantic an empire, but acted under the advice of a retired chief commisioner of the company. This was Donald Smith, now Lord Strathcona, and at his suggestion 300 young Canadians were enlisted and drilled to form a body of cavalry, the North West Mounted Police. In 1874 they marched across the plains, near the Blackfoot nation, and formed that singular alliance which enabled them to seize the territories without the shedding of blood.

The liquor traders had been among the Blackfeet, so that they were sorely reduced by hunger and pestilence; but at once sale of alcohol was made penal, so that now the Indians are increasing yearly in numbers and in wealth. A truce was arranged between the Blackfeet and their ancient enemies, the Crees, which put an end to inter-tribal war. These Red Indians of the plains, supposed to be the most formidable savages on earth and numbering 23,000, were subdued by 300 men, and in solemn treaties made allies of the Empire.

A little to the southward lived the Sioux nation, ruled by the statesman, Sitting Bull, and the soldier, Spotted Tail, with 3,000 warriors. In 1876, having wiped out Gen. Custer's force of American cavalry, they found that they were suffering from too much United States army, and retired hastily to the Canadian plains. Here they discovered a little fort, sat down in front of it, and said: "Hand out your food!"

"Come and take it!" said the little fort, throwing its gates open.

So the Sioux swarmed into the fort where they saw a couple of officers armed with switches, who stood smiling blandly by the guard room door. All round the square were log buildings, loop-holed and bristling with rifles. The Sioux force was neatly trapped by a garrison of thirty men, and at a word could be massacred. They bolted.

Two days later, Sitting Bull sent word from his camp to the officer commanding: "Who are you anyhow?" "Northwest Mounted Police." "Well," said the big chief, "it's no use killing men who are not afraid to die."

Now as soon as the Blackfeet heard that the Sioux were at Wood Mountain Post they came down for a fight, but were told by Major Walsh to camp and behave themselves. The little stockade was now surrounded by 6,000 savages, all howling for blood, and resolved either to fight each other or to join hands and wipe out the police. To begin with the Blackfeet stole thirty ponies from the Sioux, and Sitting Bull, their chief, brought his complaint to Walsh. "Wait," said the major; then told off six men with orders to bring the thirty ponies out of the Blackfeet herd. In these days the Canadian lads thought no more of red Indians than they did of blackbeetles, so the six riders romped down into the Blackfeet herd; not knowing one pony from another, they took good measure, rounded up 180 horses and gaily drove them past the Blackfeet camp, which seethed out in furious pursuit. Then the six policemen, having robbed and defied 3,000 warriors, stampeded the plundered horses straight for the stockade, and rolled in just in time.

Inside the fort the six troopers were paraded up to see Major Walsh, and they blushed and simpered because they were going to be praised. "Don't you know," said Walsh, "that you've declared war against the Blackfoot nation? I've a mind to give you each three months' imprisonment!"

Within an hour the Blackfeet surrendered their thirty Sioux horses to get back the 180 which the police had stolen.

Such were the beginnings of this mighty regiment.

After The Peddlers.

A petition is being circulated in the city, praying that the county council prohibit all kinds of peddlers from plying their trade in the county. The merchants state that these men do a great injury to city trade, and at the same time pay little or no license. Numerous merchants of all classes signed the petition. It is intended, to present a similar petition to the city council.

OLD ISLANDER MARRIES.

Bertrams Tender To Build The Island Ferry Boat.

Wolfe Island, Oct. 16.—On Wednesday evening at eight o'clock in the Roman Catholic church, John Ryan, Sr., and Mrs. James Neal, were married. Jeremiah Daly assisted the groom, while Mrs. Luke Costello attended the bride. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father Collins, Cushendall. Although the hour was rather late the edifice was comfortably filled to witness the function. The groom is four-score years or more and was one of the early settlers on the island and by his industry has husbanded a fair amount of wealth. He has lived a retired life about twenty years. The bride conducts one of the best grocery stores in the village. The small boy, the big boy and the young men had gathered together a goodly supply of tin pans, horns, flutes and cow bells to do honor to the occasion, and after a short rally they were presented with two crisp ten dollar notes and the small boy was treated sumptuously to candy. It is safe to say the health of the bride and groom was the toast of the evening.

On Sunday, the 11th inst., the bans were published of Frank O'Shea and Miss Madeline Gourdier, Kingston. Last week John Cameron was married to a young lady on Garden Island.

On Wednesday evening a special meeting of the township council was held for the purpose of discussing a communication received from the Bertram works, Toronto, as a result of Reeve Fawcett and James Crawford's recent trip thereto. The Bertrams' offer was for a boat the same length as the Pierrepont, four feet wider, steel hull furnished all complete, $26,900. The council are placed in rather an awkward position as the recent by law only allows of $20,000 being expended. The council are in a quandry how to raise the balance, but they seem to be of the opinion that a boat must be had.

It is stated that diptheria is very prevalent on Simcoe Island. Several families being attacked with the dreaded scourage. The local cheese factories owing to a shortness in boxes are congested to such an extent that is feared they will have to stop making. Horse buyers visited the island last week and purchased several fine roadsters. Barny Burns has moved to Kingston. Rodney McGregor has moved from Mary Laird's place to S. Woodman's. It is stated Wilmur Boyd will move to Richard Langlin's. Wilmur disposed of his threshing machine to Victor Sudds, Simcoe Island.

Two neighbors from the foot of the island are in trouble over the pounding of some pigs. A law suit is likely to be the result.

A HAPPY EVENT.

Took Place Here On Wednesday Last.

In Kingston on Wednesday, October 14th, Miss Sadie Kennedy, daughter of the late Robert Kennedy, was united in marriage to Charles H. Knowles, Revelstoke, B.C. The Rev. Mr. Brown, pastor of Sydenham Street Methodist church performed the ceremony. The bride looked well in a becoming suit of blue broadcloth with white silk blouse, and hat to match. Numerous and costly were the gifts of the bride, the greater part of them being silver and cut glass. A very handsome dinner and tea set of china was the gift of the staff of Laidlaw's dry goods store, where Miss Kennedy has been clerk for several years, and by her gentle and cheerful manner has won the hearts of all who had the pleasure of her acquaintance. The groom has also become well known. During his two years in Kingston, he became very popular, and made a host of friends who will be pleased to hear of his prosperity in the west, where he has been appointed foreman in one of the largest machine shops. The happy young couple took the noon train for Montreal and Quebec, the groom's former home, where a hearty reception is awaiting them. Mr. and Mrs. Knowles intend visiting Chicago and Dakota, before going to their new home in the west, where the good wishes of a large circle of friends follow them.

Prime beeves sold at from 4¼c. to a little over 4¼c. per lb.; good mediums sold at about 4c., and the ordinary mediums, at about 3¼c. per lb., while the common stock sold at from 2¼c. to 3¼c. per lb. There were over 100 head of lean cows and small bulls, chiefly the former, bought by canners at about 1¼c. per lb.; some 40 large steers were bought by shippers at from 3¾c. to 4¼c. per lb.; good veal calves were scarce and sold at from 2c. to 4¼c. per lb.
