When Rev. Mr. Harcourt wrote it was to send the particulars of the fatal illness of Rev. Dr. Menzies, and contained no foreboding of the pending affliction in his own family. The letter states that Dr. Menzies from Sunday to Saturday, for six days, fought against the terrible tide of the poison that was overwhelming is system. Three doctors and a nurse vere in attendance most of the time was the terrible pneumonic type which is almost always fatal. The letter says that there have been thirtyfour attacks and twelve deaths among the children of the mission. This is 'a good record' compared with the official figures of the plague in city, which number 5,000 attacks, and only 500 saved.
