THIERS AT HOME

HE WAS POSSESSED OF PE CULIAR HABITS

His Daily Practice Caused Him Always to be Agreeable And Happy—He Was a Provenchal. The daily life of Thiers was very peculiar. He rose always at a very early hour, about 5 o'clock in the mornin seldom later. After a cup of coffee and a light repast he would work steadily for many hours. Then he usually took a walk or would perhaps play a game of tennis before breakfast, which men was served at the usual French hour Then he would speak to his friends and go out for a drive, sometimes pay visits and return a little after 4, when he went regularly to bed and slept till it was time to get ready for dinner. For some extraordinary reason his dinner hour was 7:50, and he was very punctual. After dinner he always slept for twenty minutes or half an hour and then would remain up chatting and talking to a late hour. His brightest moment was always subsequent to his after dinner sleep. No one could be more agreeable in conversation, more easy or natural or more ready to im part information without being prolix. He was a true Provencal in all his tastes and habits. He loved the bright sun of his native Provence. He thoroughly appreclated the peculiar charm of the coast near Marseilles, the beauty of the gray olive groves and the smile of the Mediterranean. He preferred the dishes of Provence to almost any others. He used to mix oil liberal ly with his food, and I remember at a dinner at the Duchesse Galliera's fair sized bottle of oil was specially placed next his plate and he consumed

Puzzled the Professors. An amusing joke was practiced upon the examiners at Cambridge, says a London paper. It had been said that the examination in mathematics had been becoming far too difficult, and very real complaints had arisen from tutors. To the astonishment of the university, all the eigtheen lutions appeared on the day before the examination in the Granta, "worked out, we believe, by our office boy." How the miracle was performed remained a secret until it had been sufficiently wondered at. The editor of the Granta had secured the services of a number of recent senior wranglers, who in privacy had deliberately set to work to master the problems which the university dons had been concocting for months past. The task had to be accomplished within twenty-four hours, and the printers were up all night setting the solutions in type. Naturally the Granta sold by the thousand that

How He Got It. A good story is told about a former member of the Missouri legislature. Before his election he was chronically

"broke." When he returned from Jefferson City, he exhibited $500 in good, crisp greenbacks. Some of his friends "jollied" him about his prosperity. "You didn't have a cent when you went to the legislature, did you,

Jones?" said one of them. "Not a blamed cent," said Jones. "As a matter of fact I lent you half your railroad fare, didn't 17"

"I believe you did." "Well, you were down in Jefferson City about forty days. You got $5 a day. Now, what the gang wants to know is how you managed to save $500 out of a total income of $200."

"Come closer," whispered Jones, "and I'll tell you how I did it. I had my washing done at home."

Remarkable Luck.

In Gold Hill, Nev., in 1877, one of the mining bosses-Tole by name-had trouble with some of the laborers in his mine. One night three of them attacked him in a barroom. Two of them pinned him down, while a third stood over him with a revolver. The muzzle almost touched his stomach. Once, twice, thrice, a fourth and a fifth time the weapon snapped. Tole closed his eyes. Each moment he expected to be his last. The disgusted ruffian threw his disappointing weapon on the floor, with an oath, and, joined by his aids, left the place. Tole wiped the cold sweat from his brow, mechanically picked up the discarded weapon, went to the door and fired off every charge, remarking that it was just his luck.

European and American Oysters. The oysters of America and Europe differ greatly. European oysters are smaller and have a coppery taste. Our southern oysters are larger than the northern. They are dredged along the coast and transferred to oyster beds in creeks close to shore, where they fatten. In London oyster salesmen some times keep oysters for a few days in water to which oatmeal has been added, for the purpose of rendering them more delicate and of better flavor. When out of season-during spawning time-the oyster is soft and milky and not fit to be eaten.

"It is difficult to say what tact is," Archbishop Langley replied when asked to define it. "Here, however, is an instance of what it is not: Only this morning a clergyman in my diocese wrote to me, 'In consideration of your grace's many infirmities and failing powers.' That was not tactful."

The Vivacious One. "The word 'vivacious,' " said the cynical codger, "is the polite social term

HOW A COLT GROWS. The Way He Developes Grace and

The development of a spindly legged colt into a full grown horse is an interesting process to watch. In "Horses

Nine" the author describes an instance | Timidity And Talent Go Together in this way: And an unhandsome colt he was. His broomstick legs seemed twice the proper length, and so thin you would hardly have believed they could ever earry him. His head, which somehow suggested the lines of a bootjack, was set awkwardly on a ewed neck. In time the slender legs thickened, the chest deepened, the barrel filled out, the head became-less ungainly. As if to make up for these improve ments, the colt's markings began to set They took the shapes of a saddle stripe three white stockings and an irregular white blaze covering one side of face and patching an eye. On chest and belly the mother sorrel came ou rather sharply, but on the rest of him was that peculiar blending which gives the blue roan shade, a color unpleasing to the critical eye and one that lowers the market value. The Death of Kenith.

The death of Kenith, the balf myth ical king of Scotland, was one of the most remarkable in all history-that is, if it can consistently be called a historical fact. According to the story, Kenith had killed a son and brother of the warlike Fennella. She for revenge caused Wiltus, the most in renious artof the time, to fashion an automatic death dealing machine, a wonderful statue filled with hidden springs, levers, etc. When finished and set up, this "brazen image" was an admirable work of art. In its right hand it held a basin and in the left an apple of pure gold, both set with diamonds and other precious stones. To touch this apple was to dare death, it being so arranged that one guilty of such vandalism would be immediately riddled by poisoned ar rows shot from loopholes in the body of the statue. Kenith was invited to come and inspect the wonder, and king like and just as Fennella had hoped be ried to pluck the precious imitation tenir. The moment his hand touched be incrusted jewel be was filled with oisoned arrows, dying where he fell,

How He Escaped. Not long ago an English curate sur prised his parishioners by marrying widow considerably older than himself The astonishment was still greater when the cause was known. The cu rate had become engaged to a young girl whose frivolous conduct soon lee him to regret the step. He offered settlement for his release, but it was refused. He endeavored in every way to break the engagement, but withou

"Is there nothing I can do to escape this?" he exclaimed one day in despair. "Yes," remarked the girl's mother, who was present and who had been the prime mover in the marriage negotiations, "by marrying me."

The curate decided, if he had to marry one of the two, he preferred the mother and accepted her. The young girl soon married a wealthy stock-

Nighteaps. For external application the night cap is rarely seen. It is first mention ed during the time of the Tudors. In the inventory of Henry VIII.'s wardrobe we come across the following item: "A nightcape of black velvet em broidered." No wonder, with such gearing, that, as Shakespeare suggests, "Uneasy rests the head that wears a crown." Poor old Bishop Latimer was not content with one nightcap. Fox in his "Book of Martyrs" describes him as follows: "He held his hat in his hand, having a handkerchief on his head and upon it a nightcap or two and a great cap, such as townsmen use, with broad flaps to button under his chin." They evidently believed in keeping their heads warm in those days.-Health.

The Danger In Cocaine. The great danger of cocaine lies and alluring of all narcotics. It causes no mental confusion; only a little more talkativeness than usual. There no headache or nausea, and the pleasaut effects are produced with a comparatively small dose, but symptoms of poisoning are rapidly developed, and within three months of the commencement of the habit there may be marked indications of degeneration, loss of memory, hallucinations and suspicions. -London Lancet.

Soil and Forage Crops. Those states which are noted for the production of forage crops not only have maintained the original fertility of the soil, but they spend for commercial fertilizers less than 1 per cent of the annual value of their crops, while those states which pay least attention to forage crops have impoverished the soil and spend annually for fertilizers from 5 to 9 per cent of the total value of their crops.

Home Appreciation. "It must be a great satisfaction to have such a palatial apartment," said the old time friend.

"It is," answered Mr. Cumrox, "It's a heap of comfort to have a house big enough to wander away and get lost in when mother and the gals are giving a musicale or a reception."

A great deal of talent is lost to the Every day sends to their graves a nummained obscure because their timidity has prevented them from making a first effort and who, if they could have been induced to begin, would in all probability have gone great lengths in the career of fame. The fact is that to do anything in this world worth doing we and thinking of the cold and danger, but jump in and scramble through as perpetually calculating risks and adjusting nice chances. It did very well before the flood; when a man could consult his friends upon an intended scheme for a hundred and fifty years and then live to see its success for six or seven centuries afterward. But at present a man waits and doubts and hesitates and consults his brother and his uncle and his first cousins and particular friends till one fine day he finds that he is sixty-five years of age; that he has lost so much time in consulting first cousins and particular friends that he has no time left to follow their advice.-Sydney Smith on "Courage In Danger In Nightmares. "I believe that dreams sometimes kill." said a prominent specialist on nervous diseases the other day. "Of course I don't know that they are fatal, but I have every reason to think so. I had a woman patient whom was treating for a number of complications, including a weak heart. She could not bear any excitement, and I often warned against exposing herself to sudden fright. She complained of having nightmare and said she often woke up in a state of terrible fright so weak that she could not call for help. One morning she was found dead in best with an expression of abject terror on her face. I have no doubt that she elied from fright produced by a night-

"Persons subject to nightmare who have weak hearts should avoid sleeping on the back. They should lie on the right side and have the right arm extended so they will wake up if they turn over. Most nightmares are the result of sleeping on the back or the left side, where the heart is so con pressed that it has little room for free

Blazed Her Way.

There is a story about Alaska and its who chose a bride from among some of the Indian tribes up toward the Chilcoot pass. He took her to a large city Montreal, perhaps, and left her in splendid hotel while he went out to see some one about a dog. She missed him sadly. She sat at the window looking out on the street four stories below. Solitude became intolerable. She decided to find her husband. There was an elevator, but she didn't care for it Softly as moccasins could carry her she issued forth. When she had gone out, a bellboy saw queer marks on the bal usters and doorcasings. The Indian bride had blazed her way with a toma hawk so that she could find her way back. The Indian bride was merely living up to her education, for it is very necessary to know how to blaze a trail

Men Crotchety at Breakfast. "If waiters had their way, men would not be permitted in a restaurant before the dinner hour, or at least before lunch," said the proprietor of a cafe on upper Broadway.

"Why? Simply because they are so cross at breakfast. No, it isn't the question of tips altogether, although never saw a waiter refuse a quarter. But the fact is men are crotchety be fore they get their breakfast. If they the fact that it is the most agreeable have to wait five minutes, it seems an hour to them, and even the morning paper seems to lose its charms unless breakfast is on the table. There is no meal in the day where the waiters get so many 'kicks' as they do at breakfast, and the men are always more ill tempered than the women.".

> A Lincoln Story. Abraham Lincoln had a rule for evading difficulties. At a cabinet meeting one day, it is related, Mr. Seward lokingly remarked, "Mr. President, hear that you turned dut for a colored woman on a muddy crossing the other day." "I don't remember," answered Lincoln musingly, "but I think it very likely. I have always made it a rule that if people won't turn out for me I will for them. If I didn't, there might be a collision."

FARM AND RANCH BELLS. Entering Into Their

Manufacture. Cow bells that chime on the western plains, sheep bells that tinkle on the big American sheep ranches, bells for grazing horses and mules and, according to Popular Mechanics, all kinds of bells for the farm and ranch are made in one factory, which stands on a hillside street in a little town in Connecti-The metal for the bells is received at the factory in large, flat sheets of thin fron direct from the rolling mill and is passed under a steam driven cutter, which turns out the properly shaped pieces like patterns for a double bladed ax. Then a ring for a clapper is fastened into the center of each piece, and it is spanned with a little iron strap for a handle. Finally the piece is bent down into the familiar bell shape and its sides riveted together on

The bell is now in shape, but it still lacks tone and color. These are gained by a coating of brass and a bath in a flery furnace. In nests of four or five the bells, ranging in size from the little three inch sheep bells to the seven inch cow bells, are placed, with a mixture of charcoal and brass filings between them, in plumbago crucibles, the lids of which are held in place by a plastering of wet clay. These are then immersed in the fire. Within the crucibles the brass spreads itself in a thin coating over the imprisoned bells, and the bell obtains its clear note. All that needs be done afterward is to burnish the bells, which is done by throwing them with a few leather scraps into a big revolving cylinder, in which they polish themselves.

The Men In Line. The land forces alone of Europe number "on the war footing" 25,000,-000 men. Even Spain has an army larger than our own.

Standing side by side 25,000,000 men would make a continuous line from Calais across Europe and Asia to Bering stratt.

Parading up Broadway at the usua pace, infantry in files of twenty, eavalry ten abreast and field giths two abreast, this force would pass city ball in about seven and a half months, parading eight hours a day, Sundays ex-

Ingrowing Toe Nails. To relieve ingrowing toe nails cut a V shaped piece out of the center of the nail, as deep down to the quick as possible, and press in all around the nd as much as possible under the ingrowing part some good yellow soap. In the course of a few days or so take the pointed end of a small penknife blade and scrape out all the soap and if possible insert the blade under the ingrowing part and with a dexterous twist turn the edge of the blade upward and pare off as much of the ingrowing part as possible. Then press in some more soap and a small piece of absorbent cotton between the nail and the overlapping flesh to keep the nail from pressing on the same. In the course of a few weeks the flesh under the ingrowing part will become so callous that no pain will be felt, and

A man-an artist and a very shy person-walked out with the woman he delighted to honor and asked her to marry him. In stepping closer to her, as the occasion seemed to demand, early in the walk he got his foot through her large and expansive boop and was too modest to make any attempt to remove it. She was equally timid, so they took their walk, settled matters (she consenting) and came home with his foot still held in her hoop. History does not state how it was finally removed. I only know the story is true, and the pair today are old married lovers.

A Raw Oyster. Although the actual amount of nutritive material in a raw oyster is small, it comprises all classes of food substances in a peculiarly assimilable form. Generally speaking, the raw mollusk consists of four-fifths water. The danger-a remote one-of the oys ter containing living typhoid fever germs may be obviated by the use of lemon juice. The oyster is rendered tough and indigestible by boiling.

Altogether Too Inquisitive. Burgess-What a humbug Dolver is: When I asked him if he had read my article about "The Epochal Era," he said he had and that it was the finest thing he had seen for years, but when I came to question him I found he didn't know the first thing about the article.
