WOMEN AND THEIR WAYS

A Budget of Interesting Things For Fair Readers Clipped From Many Sources--Snatches of Poetry for the Romantic.

Women Who Flirt.

The question is, "Are there any women who do not flirt?"

displeasure strike the back of the hand against the gloves, and if you are furious take them away altogether.

A Psalm Of Life.

Tell me not in mournful numbers, Eating is an empty dream;

Daily Child Story.

"I want a hair brush for my mamma's birthday present," said little Johnny as he approached the counter.

Mlle. Lucie Faure, daughter of the late President Faure of France, soon to marry M. Pierre Coyan, she noted author.

Almost Leap Year.

They had been talking as they walked. She had remarked parenthetically: "Oh, it must be terrible to a man to be rejected by a woman."

Wedding Superstitions.

Stumbling upstairs indicates a wedding in the home before the year is out.

The Girl Behind The Pie.

Baltimore News. The man behind the cannon and the girl behind the man.

There she stands with cup of coffee, slabs of pastry, chunks of cake.

Call her Liz or plain Ellen, or Elizabeth, mayhap.

You may keep your fabled wonders in the long immortal line.

New Language.

The language of gloves may now be added to those secret tongues which find speech in flower fans, and even the prosaic postage stamp.

every woman wonders, what every man is trying to find out. Philosophers have puzzled their wise old heads about it more than about the immortality of the soul.

The Tone Of Voice.

Home Chat. Not so much what you say, As the manner in which you say it.

Life is real, life is earnest. And to die is to starve: Dust thou art, to dust returnest. Does not mean we should not carve.

The Canadian Girl At Her Best.

The unity of the empire was not more seriously threatened by the Alaska decision than it is by the part pen of some English women who have been traducing our Canadian women and their dress.

Heading Off A Gossip.

Miss Kidder--They've only been married six months, but whenever her husband goes away on a business trip she's delighted and prepares to have a good time.

What She Thought Of Him.

A little girl suffering from tooth-ache was in his chair to have the tooth removed. She refused to let him proceed at first, being afraid of the pain.

Want It Revived.

A marriage custom of the good old days, which brides would like to see revived, is the giving of the dowd purse. This was a sum of money placed in a purse and given by the bridegroom to the bride either on the evening of their marriage or the next morning.

A Bunch Of Things.

The hair will be worn high for evenings and ornamented with dainty wreaths of leaves, garlands of tiny pink or white roses, sprays of golden wheat, agrettes of feather, lace or narrow gauze ribbon.

Putting It Mild.

She--Don't you think you were rather severe in saying that Matilda

He never had felt Dan Cupid's dart, The callow youth who said He'd rather nurse a bro ken heart Than mend a broken head.

was the most inveterate talker you ever met? He--Oh, I didn't put it in that bald way.

The Motherlode.

Chicago Tribune. You take the finest woman with th' roses in her cheeks.

Promises.

Once when I was very sick, And doctor thought I'd die.

But when the fever went away, And I began to mend.

How Do You Treat Your Mother?

Girls, how many of you kiss your mother good night and good morning?

MISS CONSTANCE LIVERMORE.

The popular society girl and daughter of the Baroness de Villiers, of New York.

Almost Heroic.

A farmer went into the office of a Bedford, Me., dentist the other day and inquired what the charge was for pulling a tooth.

Tea Cup "Fortunes."

When the tea has been drunk and only the tea leaves and tea dust are left in the cup, turn the cup over slowly, bottom side up, and turn it three times on the saucer.

Like All Dreams.

"Oh, mamma," exclaimed small Willie. "I dreamed that I had a real live pony!"
