VICTORIA, B.C. IN CAPITAL OF BRITISH COLUMBIA.

Story of The Hudson's Bay Company as it Relates to Its Beginning in Victoria.

Victoria, B.C., is said to be the one place, above all others on the American continent, where an Englishman may feel at home.

The history of the place is inseparably linked with the ancient Hudson's Bay Company, which won this portion of the continent for Britain's red banner in the long ago.

Their little city is famed for its beauty, for its cleanliness, for its law and order, and for its old-fashioned homes, the old-fashioned houses of Victoria.

The trumpet call to arms that is sounding through the west, arousing new commercial forces, finds few recruits in Victoria. The people here are rich, or well-to-do; or, if neither, satisfied.

Victoria has every reason to be proud of its association with the Hudson's Bay Company. The history of this old corporation reads like the fanciful tale of some old story-teller.

The manner of communication embraced every possible means of transportation. Horses, boats, dog trails, and when none of these could be utilized the traders carried the goods upon their backs.

The old records of the Hudson's Bay Company are still very bitter over being barred from the Behring Sea sealing grounds. They still engage in what is called coast sealing, and this method of taking the seals is the most interesting, most humane and most skillful.

At the present rate it will not be long before an essay may be written upon the passing of the cap and gown in the University of Toronto.

SHOPLIFTERS. HOW TREATED WHEN DISCOVERED.

Elaborate Means For Watching Customers in London Shops Who Are Light of Hand. Though there is every appearance in all the great London shops that the public is to be trusted implicitly, says the London Daily Mail, an elaborate and carefully organized system of espionage prevails to circumvent the designs of the peripatetic thief and the marauding kleptomaniac.

The invisible detective, whose office is some unsuspected gallery in the ceiling, whence from artfully designed peep holes in the molding he can survey the whole establishment, is the most successful foil to the shoplifter.

Every shopwalker and counter attendant is in effect a detective, but there are some professionals who assume the guise to hide their real position. It is the duty of every attendant when he is suspicious of a customer to call the attention of the detective to her, not blatantly, but by prearranged sign.

When an attendant misses or thinks he misses something, or notices disturbing signs of thievery he speaks to the detective who, as an elegantly garbed customer, seats herself in a position commanding a good view of the suspect and makes her purchases like any other woman, all the while gathering data upon which to proceed.

Victoria's more recent claim to attention arose from its being the great port for sealers. The industry was at its best in the early nineties, and the feet of vessels hailing from Victoria at that time numbered 60. There are now 42 vessels in the fleet, and half of them are at anchor in the harbor here, with nothing to do.
