BROADBRIM'S

Letter from Greater New York.

GOOD CHANCE

FOR UNITED STATES TO HAVE NEW FIGHT.

Canal Begun by De Lesseps Will Be Finished by "Yankee Doodle"—Horse Show a Success—Yankee Aristocracy.

(Letter correspondence, No. 1,384.) New York, Nov. 27.—Whichever way we turn on the field of Mars, a chance for a new fight awaits us. We acknowledge the independence of Panama and the republic of Columbia jumps into the ring, and throws down its red hat for a row, and declares that within half an hour, it will kill every American in its domain. But Germany comes forward supporting the new isthmian republic. So, all hail, to the new nation, the day of its final deliverance is here, and we are sure that the canal, which was begun by De Lesseps, and which proved to be his bete noir, will now be finished by "Yankee Doodle," and having put our hand to the plough, we will never look back till the canal is done.

And now there arises a vision of those splendid nations that shall arise upon the shores of that western land. I hope to see the dream become the grandest revelation of our time. I wonder if our people fully comprehend the advance made in the republic of the United States, since President McKinley first took hold of the nation's reins. Our flag, to-day, waves over the Sandwich Islands, and the Fiji are knocking for admittance to our door. Following outward to Alaska, and in that which we supposed to be a barren waste, the territory is proving to be one of the brightest gems in the American coronet. Only paid ten millions of dollars for that domain, its gold, its silver, its fisheries and other evidences of great wealth, the amount of which we have taken out in a single year. Manila, rescued from the grasp of the Spaniard, is ours by right of conquest. We have given to Cuba her freedom, and she has realized her dream of independence, and she is now reported to be asking for statehood in our republic. Porto Rico is ours, and in case of another war, may prove to our nation a priceless treasure.

One of the most interesting features of the week just passed has been the horse show; it being one of the most satisfactory and delightful exhibits, which all classes, high and low, rich and poor, enjoy. It is with genuine and unqualified satisfaction that we have seen it taken out of the hands of cockeys and race track touts. It is a pleasure, a genuine pleasure to go into the exhibition. Here one can see the best members of the 400, and Madison Square Garden during the week has been the place where the proudest aristocracy met. Look at that noble animal, the horse, and that upright within you a feeling of indignation that any self-respecting man should ever give birth to the idea that the horse could possibly be banished from his association with man. The horse and the dog are man's truest friends. The horse may not be quite as demonstrative as the dog, but he knows his master and his mistress; he knows, too, who treats him well, and who treats him ill. I have often heard a little horse in a stable door, when I opened the stable door. He could tell me by my footsteps, so acute was his sense of hearing, and, as I sat on his back he seemed as glad to carry me as I was to ride. No expense was spared to make the present horse show the best that has

Wolves Around Camp.

Long Lake, Nov. 25.—Our school is opened again by Albert Kennedy, of Sydvanham. H. Dene has gone to Montreal, to dispose of his herd of cattle. Arthur Grant, Stratheona, has moved on William Fraser's farm. Alfred Charlton, William Ritchie and Howard Ritchie are hauling ore to Mountain Grève. Herbert Sly and George Stier, cheese-makers, have gone to their homes in Elgin. The hunters have returned with good success. This sport would not be appreciated by some for at night the brave slumbers are awakened by howling wolves close to the camp. Some of the men were very apt in mimicking the brutes, which are so cunning, that hunters scarcely ever see them. George Asselstine has bought John Cota's farm. Levi Grant has bought a threshing engine. The roads are in fine condition. Mr. and Mrs. Frank Leslie, Godfrey, are at J. M. Smith's.

The action of Carter's Little Liver Pills is pleasant and natural. They gently stimulate the liver, and regulate the bowels, but do not purge. They are sure to please. Try them. At the home of James Wiltse, Athens, on Wednesday, his only daughter Nellie, was united in marriage to Let. Kilborn, of Plum Hollow. ever been given in New York. Our first ladies came there alone or attended by their maids, and their treatment was the same as they could expect if they were in their own drawing-rooms. My impression is that the financial result will be more satisfactory than for many a season past. A very fine display of costly costumes were to be seen on our ladies this year, and, in fact, this has come to be an established expectation of this fair. I am always gratified when the horse show is announced; you may improve your automobiles till they reach the highest perfection, or with your flying machines you may sail through the air, as the thunderbolt cleaves the sky, or what wonderful inventions may come from the marvellous ingenuity of the brain of man, till one hundred miles an hour comes to be considered an ordinary rate of travel, but the horse, the noble horse, whose most perfect creation is found on the Arabian sands, shall never leave us, and it is, with great pleasure that I am able to record that the present horse exhibition, in the year of our Lord, 1903, has never been surpassed, even in the city of Greater New York. The awards are considered to have been both just and generous, and the management said to be beyond all praise, and for general satisfaction, considered from every standpoint it is exceptional. Long may it continue so!

"By hook or by crook we've caught a Duke, and now I'll tell a story."

Believe it or not, as you choose, but we are having classes forced upon us; not by their growth from the masses, but by importation from other lands. It seems but yesterday when in our first-class hotels a Chinese gong was rung, and the guests must be up if they wanted any breakfast, at six o'clock in the morning whether they liked it or not. The gong has disappeared and now, a guest can sleep to his heart's content. The gongs may be exhibited in museums, or may have gone back to the Chinese capital, Pekin, to make amends for the treasure we looted during the late unpleasantness. I mention these facts to show our advance in the civilization of our times.

Miss Golet, who was said to be the richest woman in Christendom, was married to the Duke of Roxburgh, a pleasant young Scotchman, well spoken of in the tongue of good report, and a real live duke; that is, he has no large amount of the world's "filthy lucre," but there is no bar-sinister across his escutcheon. While drawing up the marriage articles the American lawyer ventured to suggest that it was a pretty heavy dot that the American girl was bringing to her husband; the English lawyer, looking up in amazement, said, "Yes, its true the American girl has some money, but consider the honor we confer upon you." The wedding day finally came, and it was such an affair as New York has seldom seen and was only equalled by the Duke of Marlborough, who led two Americans to that noble estate as duchesses. Many days before the wedding, presents began to pour in to the value of hundreds of dollars; there were two tiaras worth $100,000 and the aggregate was not less than a good round million. Every new description served to excite our female population to a greater degree and there were thousands of people who would have given a large amount to take a peep at Miss Golet's treasure-house. Neither she nor Roxburgh's duke are ostentatious; both would have preferred a quiet wedding, but society determined otherwise. Early on the morn of the wedding day it was evident that something unusual was to take place. All public conveyances were loaded, though admission to the church was only by card. A peaceful pageant was going on within the church, but, outside, but society determined otherwise. Early on the morn of the wedding day it was evident that something unusual was to take place. Ferrol Fattens Faster than any other emulsion of Cod Liver Oil, for the following good and sufficient reasons: It is a perfect emulsion of the finest Cod Liver Oil that can be obtained, and is, therefore, very easily assimilated. It is the only emulsion which contains Iron, which is absolutely necessary for the production of rich, red, healthy blood. It contains Phosphorus in proper quantity, and is, therefore, an admirable nerve and brain food. Besides supplying the necessary food for Tissue, Blood and Nerve, it acts as a splendid tonic, and enables the system to make proper use of the food thus supplied. For the treatment of Consumption, Anæmia, General Debility, or wasting diseases of any kind, Ferrol has no equal. Try it and be convinced.

What Made Him Tired.

Bret Harte, being once asked whether his California types were in any way exaggerated, replied: "I can't say they are. In fact, I had to tone 'em down. For instance, here is a true story, which if I had put it into any of my books no one would have believed: An English tenderfoot was having a drink at a bar out west when a noted desperado happened along. The other men in the bar mostly found they had pressing business elsewhere, but the tenderfoot stayed on. 'Say,' said the desperado to him, 'you'll take a drink?' I dare say you know that in California the men drink with a man is much worse than running with his wife, so when the tenderfoot said he didn't want anything to drink there was a kind of awful silence. Then the desperado wearily reached for his gun and said in a tired sort of way: 'Can't even have a drink without killin' a man?'"

A Matter of Etiquette.

When the Earl of Lillithgow was a boy he had a particularly fine fleet of miniature ships manned by small boys from the estate, dressed as men-of-war. Once, when the King of Denmark, was on a visit to Hopetoun house, he reviewed the little fleet and, struck by the smart appearance of one of the small "handy men," approvingly patted him on the head. The child, apparently overcome by the unexpected honor, handed his miniature rig so awkwardly that he did, sharply prod the royal waistcoat with his bayonet. The future earl, who was then about fifteen, was at forward heard to reprimand the offender thus: "When a King pats you on the head, don't prod him in the stomach, salute him!" If there ever was a specific for any one complaint, then Carter's Little Liver Pills are a specific for sick headache, and every woman should know this. Only one pill a dose. Try them.

A UNIQUE DOG CART.

Dogs similar to the one shown in the accompanying picture are not often seen, but a dozen years from now they are likely to be quite popular. They are known as Russian wolf hounds, and some fine specimens were recently imported to England, where they attracted much attention. In Russia these animals are highly valued both for their strength and vigilance. As watch dogs they are said to be unexcelled, and experts maintain that they are almost, if not quite, as strong as mastiffs and are far more active. At a dog show which was recently held in England half a dozen of these foreign hounds were exhibited and they were admired so much that now not only several dealers but also some wealthy country gentlemen have decided to import others from Russia.

ALMOST EQUALLED SHEPPARD

Swiss Burglar's Sensational Escape From Prison.

Geneva, Nov. 26.—A modern Jack Sheppard, named Vitali, a native of Verona, has been sentenced to ten years' penal servitude, and an accomplice named Beaudry to two years, by the tribunal at Haute Savoy. Vitali was accused of eleven thefts and burglaries, but in all he committed fifty-two before being captured. Twice he escaped from the police station, and vowed he would never be taken alive. He always carried a loaded revolver and terrorized the inhabitants of the entire department. The manner of his escape from Anancy prison was sensational. With a bar of iron he fabricated a key which opened all the doors of the prison. One day he walked out, and with the aid of a rope, which he made with bits of string, climbed over the high wall.

On gaining entrance to a house he ransacked the place. Nothing came amiss to him—money, bicycles, stockings, books, ties, corsets, table napkins, stockings, even postage stamps were found in a barn where the burglar concealed his booty. He was a great favorite with women, being a handsome man, and possessing winning ways. He received the long sentence with the greatest sangfroid, and asked a gendarme standing at his side for a drink.

SalARY OF MAYOR.

Expenses Are Usually Greater Than His Pay. London Chronicle. At the election of London's lord mayor took place on the feast of St. Simon and St. Jude, October 28th; then it was changed to the feast of the Translation of Edward the Confessor, October 13th; but since the year 1346 it has invariably taken place on Michaelmas day. The lord mayor receives out of the city's cash £10,000, more than twice as much as was received by Lord Mayor Wilkes in 1774; but his expenses are usually much in excess of his allowance. Wilkes' account showed a balance of expenditure over receipts of £3,337. Among other curious items of revenue was £702 from the "cockpit" office, an annual present of plate from the Jews worth £600, alienation of a young man's place, £40, and sale of a young man's place, £100.

SALARY OF MAYOR.

Many lord mayors besides Whittington have risen from low estate. Sir William Staines, who was lord mayor in 1801, had been a common laboring bricklayer. An old lady foretold Sir William's fortune. She said he would be lord mayor during a period of turbulence and scarcity; that was during his mayoralty with France, but that during his mayoralty there was plenty would be restored. The prophecy was fulfilled to the letter. At the beginning of his mayoralty we were at war with our French neighbors, and Nelson was presented at the Guildhall with the sword publicly voted after the battle of the Nile. There was also great scarcity, bread riots were the order of the day. Before Sir William Staines' term of office had expired peace was declared, and it was hoped that bread would fall to 9d. "We were the good old days of protection."

GINGER DRUNK

HABIT OF DRINKING THIS IN TOXICANT PREVAILS.

Will Kill in a Few Years—When Craving For Ginger Has Taken Grip on Man Not Even Whiskey Satisfies Him. Nashville, Tenn., Nov. 28.—The recent death of a mountaineer from over-indulgence in ginger recalls the fact that, through the south especially, and more than ever in prohibition districts where it is difficult to procure whiskey, the habit of drinking ginger still exists. That a person may become intoxicated on cognac, and that hilarious jags, which often end fatally, may be built up on wood alcohol, are facts which have become generally known. But the use of ginger as an intoxicant only has not been widely advertised. Yet hundreds of persons are victims of the ginger habit, and others still of the cocaine and morphine habits. There are some pharmacies in the smaller towns in the south, and especially in Georgia, that have a regular ginger custom, composed of people who drink the stuff because they are unable to purchase liquid refreshments of the kind officially known as intoxicating.

HABIT OF DRINKING THIS IN TOXICANT PREVAILS.

Will Kill in a Few Years—When Craving For Ginger Has Taken Grip on Man Not Even Whiskey Satisfies Him. Nashville, Tenn., Nov. 28.—The recent death of a mountaineer from over-indulgence in ginger recalls the fact that, through the south especially, and more than ever in prohibition districts where it is difficult to procure whiskey, the habit of drinking ginger still exists. That a person may become intoxicated on cognac, and that hilarious jags, which often end fatally, may be built up on wood alcohol, are facts which have become generally known. But the use of ginger as an intoxicant only has not been widely advertised. Yet hundreds of persons are victims of the ginger habit, and others still of the cocaine and morphine habits. There are some pharmacies in the smaller towns in the south, and especially in Georgia, that have a regular ginger custom, composed of people who drink the stuff because they are unable to purchase liquid refreshments of the kind officially known as intoxicating.

Ginger is made from alcohol and ginger root. The root is ground and put into a funnel shaped percolator, and the alcohol is poured on it and soaks through to the jar, in the mouth of which is fixed the funnel. The tincture is as hot as liquid fire, and a teaspoonful is a big dose for an ordinary man. One pound of ginger will make two quarts of tincture. As a man becomes addicted to the habit of drinking it, he can gradually increase the dose, and a case has been known where a confirmed ginger drunkard thought nothing of taking four ounces (about thirty-two teaspoonfuls) at one drink. An entreaty attempting such a feat would not be long enough to regret it. He would be stricken with terrible convulsions and would lapse into a comatose state and die without regaining consciousness.

Ginger is far more injurious than whiskey and will kill a man who drinks it regularly in two or three years. Something of its terrible effect may be conceived when it is known that if a tablespoonful of it were held in a man's mouth a minute the inside coating of the mouth would be blistered. When the stomach has to grapple with two, or maybe three, tablespoonfuls of ginger every day the effect on that delicate organ can be imagined. A difference between whiskey and ginger is that the man who drinks the latter becomes deathly pale, in direct contrast to the rosy hue which the face of the whiskey drinker assumes. And his effect on a man's mind and morals is worse. Whiskey and ginger drinkers soon lose regard of truth and practice deception from choice. They become hypochondriacs, and imagine that they are afflicted with every disease under the sun. One might think that as ginger costs more than whiskey the drunkard would prefer the cheaper intoxicant, but the craving for ginger is a distinct taste and cannot be satisfied by anything but the real article.

CUTICURA OINTMENT

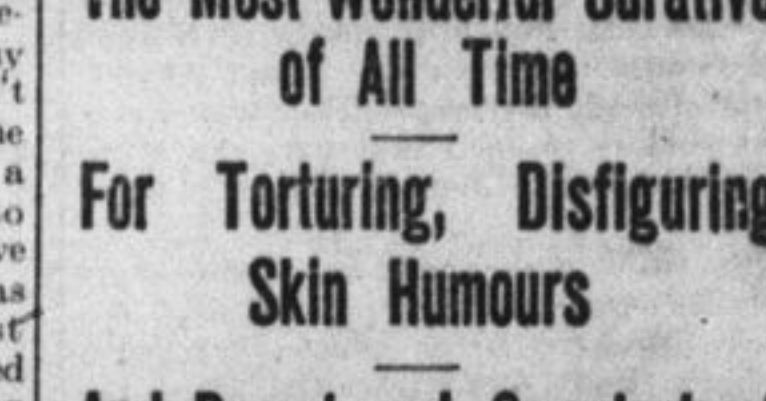

Purest of Emollients and Greatest of Skin Cures. The Most Wonderful Curative of All Time For Torturing, Disfiguring Skin Humours And Purest and Sweetest of Toilet Emollients.

Cuticura Ointment is beyond question the most successful curative for torturing, disfiguring humours of the skin and scalp, including loss of hair, even compound, in proof of which a single anointing preceded by a hot bath with Cuticura Soap, and followed by the severer cases, by a dose of Cuticura Resolvent, is often sufficient to afford immediate relief in the most distressing forms of itching, burning and scaly humours, permit rest and sleep, and point to a speedy cure when all other remedies fail. It is especially so in the treatment of infants and children, cleansing, soothing and healing the most distressing of infantile humours, and preserving, purifying and beautifying the skin, scalp and hair.

Cuticura Ointment possesses, at the same time, the charm of satisfying the simple wants of the toilet, in caring for the skin, scalp, hair, hands and feet, from infancy to age, far more effectually, agreeably and economically than the most expensive of toilet emollients. Its "Instant relief for skin-tortured babies," or "Sanative, antiseptic cleansing," or "One-night treatment of the hands or feet," or "Single treatment of the hair," or "Use after athletics," cycling, golf, tennis, riding, sparring, or any sport, each in connection with the use of Cuticura Soap, is sufficient evidence of this.

Cuticura Ointment, liquid and in the form of Cuticura Creamed Pills, Cuticura Ointment and Cuticura Soap are sold throughout the world. Depot, London, 7, Waterloo Street. In Toronto, 110, Dundas Street West. In Kingston, H. B. Taylor, 89, Front Street East. Sole Proprietors, Spence & Co., Limited, Toronto.
