The second reason why railroads will be able to weather a period of depression is based on the better maintenance of freight rates. In 1933, when such a large percentage of the railroads of the country were forced into the hands of receivers, freight rates were cut to a point where it was impossible to make a profit.

CAN STAND IT. ROADS CAN WEATHER FINANCIAL GALES. During The Next Period of Depression Only A Few Of The Railroads Will Pass Into Receivers' Hands.

New York, Dec. 3.-It is the belief of the leading railroad officials of the country that the next period of depression will cause only a few of the railroads of the United States to be forced into the hands of receivers.

IT IS THE BEST. The Evening Paper Is The Favorite. Mr. Pattison, publisher of the New York Evening Post, in an interview in Printer's Ink, speaks as follows regarding the relative merits of evening and morning papers.

"I incline naturally to the conviction that the afternoon paper is the paper of the future. These are a few of my reasons, and I have never seen them successfully controverted. A careful comparison by a disinterested party would probably show that from eighty-five per cent. to ninety per cent. of the news appearing in the morning papers every day for a stated period, appeared in the evening papers of the day before and that it would also be shown conclusively that it was only occasionally that news found in the morning papers and not covered by the evening papers of the day before as of any material importance.

"Then again, the evening paper is essentially a home paper. The evening paper is either bought by the male head of the family on his way home, or else is served to him by his newsdealer at his residence. In either case it is read not only by himself but by most of the other members of his family, and after they have finished with it, it usually falls into the hands of the servants, and is read by them. From the point of view of quantity, this home circulation cannot be over-estimated.

"The careful reading which the evening paper gets, not only by one but by all the members of the family, should be kept constantly in mind by the advertiser. It is read during the leisure part of the day, when business and householding cares have at least for the time being been dismissed from the mind. The morning paper, in a comparatively few instances, is received by the male member of the family at the breakfast table, but in most cases is purchased by you on the way to business. In either case it is hastily generally read by only one member of the family and then thrown away or destroyed. The value of an evening paper as an advertising medium is not to be compared with that of a morning paper, even though the morning paper has a much larger circulation.

FAMILIAR SONGS. Go Where Glory Waits Thee. Thomas Moore was one of the voluminous writers of his day, and no one in any age wrote more beautiful verse and composed more charming music for it.

When, at eve, thou rovest By the star thou lovest, O then remember me! When, when the moon is setting, Think when home thou'rt turning, Bright we've seen it burning, O then remember me!

Pandora Range Hot-air Flues. Oven. If the hot air flues in a range are not properly constructed, much of the heat from the fire-box will be wasted up the chimney, and the oven will not bake uniformly. Flues in the "Pandora" range have been given special attention, and are so constructed that all the heat travels around the oven twice and passes directly under all the pot holes before escaping up the chimney.
