

THE 5 P. M. EDITION.

SECOND EDITION NEWS ALSO ON PAGE FIVE.

COMMERCIAL MATTERS.

What is Going on in the Business World—The Markets.

Grand-Trunk railway system earnings April 9th to 14th, 1904, $677,192, 1903, $677,127; increase, $60,065.

The Dominion Steel company's rod mill is now complete, and as soon as the mill is finished, which should be in a week or so, the company will be turning out rods.

It is reported on the Board of Trade in Chicago that the Armour Grain Company has chartered vessel room for about 3,000,000 bushels of grain to be loaded by the opening of navigation.

The commission sent by government to Europe to investigate electric smelting will report that steel can be made from iron ore at $8 a ton.

The census of the United States produced chickens and eggs to the value of $290,000,000. This is equal to the combined wages of all the iron and steel workers and cotton and woolen factory operatives in the country in the census year 1900.

The United States Steel corporation, says the New York Herald, has booked orders to far this year amounting approximately to 1,000,000 tons.

The militia department has received from the secretary of the military council of Great Britain a communication stating that those Canadian artificers who went out to South Africa, but served with imperial regiments, will be given the imperial war gratuity of a sergeant's rank.

A divisional court is, to-day, hearing an appeal by the plaintiff from a non-suit, entered by Chancellor Boyd, in the action brought by William Lundy, against Dawson Riley, contractor for part of the Canadian Niagara Power company's plant.

The plaintiff was injured while at work at this plant, and is suing, through his father, for damages.

A deputation from Branford, accompanied by members of the Lord's Day Alliance, interviewed the attorney-general, and premier, to-day, with reference to the proposed intention of the Branford street Railway company to run Sunday cars.

The decision of the privy council in order to protect the town interests, C. H. Ritchie, K.C., is also seeking to protect his interests in a power scheme on the McIntyre river against Mr. Jenkinson's monopoly.

The mayor has decided to ask the councils of Hamilton, London, and other Western Ontario cities and towns to join in a petition to the Dominion government to make Port Hope the Lake Ontario exit of the Trent Valley canal.

Lord Dundonald to Speak. Lord Dundonald is to be the guest of Queen's University at the convocation next week. He will address the graduates.

William Unkoff fell three stories at the Union Bank building at Winnipeg and was probably fatally injured.

AWFUL BRUTE

BLOWS GERMS DOWN HIS WIFE'S THROAT.

Seven New Cases of Personation—Royal Canadian Academicians Leave For St. Louis to Hang Pictures.

Toronto, April 19.—President Harris, Vice-President E. Wiley Grier, and Secretary James Smith, of the Royal Canadian Academy, leave here, to-morrow, for St. Louis, to install the Canadian art exhibition of 120 pictures, the pictures are already on their way to St. Louis.

About seven cases of personation have been discovered by the civic investigation, to-day, to have occurred at a booth in the Louisa street school, in St. John's ward, Controller Richardson got 110 votes here and London 167, other candidate getting 100.

"Ginger" Robinson, a celebrated character in the ward, acted as scrutineer for Richardson.

William Bradley was charged in to-day's police court with practicing medicine without proper qualifications. He was remanded.

The police magistrate to-day granted an order for protection to a Mrs. McCrae, who appealed to the court. She said her husband, William McCrae, who has consumption, made a practice of holding her monthly open-air and blowing tuberculosis germs down her throat.

A divisional court is, to-day, hearing an appeal by the plaintiff from a non-suit, entered by Chancellor Boyd, in the action brought by William Lundy, against Dawson Riley, contractor for part of the Canadian Niagara Power company's plant.

The plaintiff was injured while at work at this plant, and is suing, through his father, for damages.

A deputation from Branford, accompanied by members of the Lord's Day Alliance, interviewed the attorney-general, and premier, to-day, with reference to the proposed intention of the Branford street Railway company to run Sunday cars.

The decision of the privy council in order to protect the town interests, C. H. Ritchie, K.C., is also seeking to protect his interests in a power scheme on the McIntyre river against Mr. Jenkinson's monopoly.

The mayor has decided to ask the councils of Hamilton, London, and other Western Ontario cities and towns to join in a petition to the Dominion government to make Port Hope the Lake Ontario exit of the Trent Valley canal.

Lord Dundonald to Speak. Lord Dundonald is to be the guest of Queen's University at the convocation next week. He will address the graduates.

William Unkoff fell three stories at the Union Bank building at Winnipeg and was probably fatally injured.

A TOAST, "THE LADIES"

Response By a Tender-Hearted Bachelor.

Gentlemen—I think you must have known me and, my sentiments pretty well when you assigned to me the duty of responding to the toast of "The Ladies," for I confess it is a subject to which I have given much thought, and concerning which I have expressed unfeigned admiration. Really it touches a tender and peculiarly sensitive about it because my mother was a lady.

Oh, these mothers! how much we owe to them! Our being, our earliest nourishment, our consolation, our training in the ways of life. They are our guardian spirits, our loving helpers, our teachers, our best friends. I pity the man who has never felt a mother's love, or her slipper, when he has wandered into forbidden paths and been caught at it. I tell you, these "ladies" things to remember. In imagination I can feel those tingling still, but far better comes to my heart the remembrance, that while she caused my tears to flow she had all she could do to keep her own from mingling with mine.

And my sister, I heartily respond for her, because being older than I, she guided my infant footsteps over many rough places, carried me when I was tired and—boxed my ears when I was naughty.

My sweetheart, I cannot tell you how many there were of her. I never knew—but my schoolroom could send all of her. I don't know which of her I loved the best. I know some of her loved me well—but my stolen cherries, nuts and candy better. She was of all ages, all styles of beauty, white and brown, pale and rosy, and a romp; but I loved her dearly, and for her I respond to-night.

My wife! Don't laugh. It is true that I have none now, but in the future, when I join hands with her at the altar, and proudly call her mine—the number of her shoes—I shall not her because I love her. I drink to her good health wherever she is to-night.

My wife! Don't laugh. It is true that I have none now, but in the future, when I join hands with her at the altar, and proudly call her mine—the number of her shoes—I shall not her because I love her. I drink to her good health wherever she is to-night.

My wife! Don't laugh. It is true that I have none now, but in the future, when I join hands with her at the altar, and proudly call her mine—the number of her shoes—I shall not her because I love her. I drink to her good health wherever she is to-night.

My wife! Don't laugh. It is true that I have none now, but in the future, when I join hands with her at the altar, and proudly call her mine—the number of her shoes—I shall not her because I love her. I drink to her good health wherever she is to-night.

My wife! Don't laugh. It is true that I have none now, but in the future, when I join hands with her at the altar, and proudly call her mine—the number of her shoes—I shall not her because I love her. I drink to her good health wherever she is to-night.

My wife! Don't laugh. It is true that I have none now, but in the future, when I join hands with her at the altar, and proudly call her mine—the number of her shoes—I shall not her because I love her. I drink to her good health wherever she is to-night.

My wife! Don't laugh. It is true that I have none now, but in the future, when I join hands with her at the altar, and proudly call her mine—the number of her shoes—I shall not her because I love her. I drink to her good health wherever she is to-night.

My wife! Don't laugh. It is true that I have none now, but in the future, when I join hands with her at the altar, and proudly call her mine—the number of her shoes—I shall not her because I love her. I drink to her good health wherever she is to-night.

My wife! Don't laugh. It is true that I have none now, but in the future, when I join hands with her at the altar, and proudly call her mine—the number of her shoes—I shall not her because I love her. I drink to her good health wherever she is to-night.

My wife! Don't laugh. It is true that I have none now, but in the future, when I join hands with her at the altar, and proudly call her mine—the number of her shoes—I shall not her because I love her. I drink to her good health wherever she is to-night.

My wife! Don't laugh. It is true that I have none now, but in the future, when I join hands with her at the altar, and proudly call her mine—the number of her shoes—I shall not her because I love her. I drink to her good health wherever she is to-night.

My wife! Don't laugh. It is true that I have none now, but in the future, when I join hands with her at the altar, and proudly call her mine—the number of her shoes—I shall not her because I love her. I drink to her good health wherever she is to-night.

My wife! Don't laugh. It is true that I have none now, but in the future, when I join hands with her at the altar, and proudly call her mine—the number of her shoes—I shall not her because I love her. I drink to her good health wherever she is to-night.

My wife! Don't laugh. It is true that I have none now, but in the future, when I join hands with her at the altar, and proudly call her mine—the number of her shoes—I shall not her because I love her. I drink to her good health wherever she is to-night.

My wife! Don't laugh. It is true that I have none now, but in the future, when I join hands with her at the altar, and proudly call her mine—the number of her shoes—I shall not her because I love her. I drink to her good health wherever she is to-night.

My wife! Don't laugh. It is true that I have none now, but in the future, when I join hands with her at the altar, and proudly call her mine—the number of her shoes—I shall not her because I love her. I drink to her good health wherever she is to-night.

My wife! Don't laugh. It is true that I have none now, but in the future, when I join hands with her at the altar, and proudly call her mine—the number of her shoes—I shall not her because I love her. I drink to her good health wherever she is to-night.

My wife! Don't laugh. It is true that I have none now, but in the future, when I join hands with her at the altar, and proudly call her mine—the number of her shoes—I shall not her because I love her. I drink to her good health wherever she is to-night.

My wife! Don't laugh. It is true that I have none now, but in the future, when I join hands with her at the altar, and proudly call her mine—the number of her shoes—I shall not her because I love her. I drink to her good health wherever she is to-night.

My wife! Don't laugh. It is true that I have none now, but in the future, when I join hands with her at the altar, and proudly call her mine—the number of her shoes—I shall not her because I love her. I drink to her good health wherever she is to-night.

My wife! Don't laugh. It is true that I have none now, but in the future, when I join hands with her at the altar, and proudly call her mine—the number of her shoes—I shall not her because I love her. I drink to her good health wherever she is to-night.

My wife! Don't laugh. It is true that I have none now, but in the future, when I join hands with her at the altar, and proudly call her mine—the number of her shoes—I shall not her because I love her. I drink to her good health wherever she is to-night.

My wife! Don't laugh. It is true that I have none now, but in the future, when I join hands with her at the altar, and proudly call her mine—the number of her shoes—I shall not her because I love her. I drink to her good health wherever she is to-night.

My wife! Don't laugh. It is true that I have none now, but in the future, when I join hands with her at the altar, and proudly call her mine—the number of her shoes—I shall not her because I love her. I drink to her good health wherever she is to-night.

My wife! Don't laugh. It is true that I have none now, but in the future, when I join hands with her at the altar, and proudly call her mine—the number of her shoes—I shall not her because I love her. I drink to her good health wherever she is to-night.

My wife! Don't laugh. It is true that I have none now, but in the future, when I join hands with her at the altar, and proudly call her mine—the number of her shoes—I shall not her because I love her. I drink to her good health wherever she is to-night.

My wife! Don't laugh. It is true that I have none now, but in the future, when I join hands with her at the altar, and proudly call her mine—the number of her shoes—I shall not her because I love her. I drink to her good health wherever she is to-night.

My wife! Don't laugh. It is true that I have none now, but in the future, when I join hands with her at the altar, and proudly call her mine—the number of her shoes—I shall not her because I love her. I drink to her good health wherever she is to-night.

My wife! Don't laugh. It is true that I have none now, but in the future, when I join hands with her at the altar, and proudly call her mine—the number of her shoes—I shall not her because I love her. I drink to her good health wherever she is to-night.

My wife! Don't laugh. It is true that I have none now, but in the future, when I join hands with her at the altar, and proudly call her mine—the number of her shoes—I shall not her because I love her. I drink to her good health wherever she is to-night.

My wife! Don't laugh. It is true that I have none now, but in the future, when I join hands with her at the altar, and proudly call her mine—the number of her shoes—I shall not her because I love her. I drink to her good health wherever she is to-night.

My wife! Don't laugh. It is true that I have none now, but in the future, when I join hands with her at the altar, and proudly call her mine—the number of her shoes—I shall not her because I love her. I drink to her good health wherever she is to-night.

My wife! Don't laugh. It is true that I have none now, but in the future, when I join hands with her at the altar, and proudly call her mine—the number of her shoes—I shall not her because I love her. I drink to her good health wherever she is to-night.

My wife! Don't laugh. It is true that I have none now, but in the future, when I join hands with her at the altar, and proudly call her mine—the number of her shoes—I shall not her because I love her. I drink to her good health wherever she is to-night.

My wife! Don't laugh. It is true that I have none now, but in the future, when I join hands with her at the altar, and proudly call her mine—the number of her shoes—I shall not her because I love her. I drink to her good health wherever she is to-night.

My wife! Don't laugh. It is true that I have none now, but in the future, when I join hands with her at the altar, and proudly call her mine—the number of her shoes—I shall not her because I love her. I drink to her good health wherever she is to-night.

My wife! Don't laugh. It is true that I have none now, but in the future, when I join hands with her at the altar, and proudly call her mine—the number of her shoes—I shall not her because I love her. I drink to her good health wherever she is to-night.

My wife! Don't laugh. It is true that I have none now, but in the future, when I join hands with her at the altar, and proudly call her mine—the number of her shoes—I shall not her because I love her. I drink to her good health wherever she is to-night.

My wife! Don't laugh. It is true that I have none now, but in the future, when I join hands with her at the altar, and proudly call her mine—the number of her shoes—I shall not her because I love her. I drink to her good health wherever she is to-night.

My wife! Don't laugh. It is true that I have none now, but in the future, when I join hands with her at the altar, and proudly call her mine—the number of her shoes—I shall not her because I love her. I drink to her good health wherever she is to-night.

IT IS WASTED.

BIG LOSS OF POWER AT CHAUDIERE FALLS.

May Hold Back Water To Be Used In Season's Of Lowness—The Government Will Have a Survey Made.

Ottawa, April 19.—The hydraulic survey of the water-power at the Chaudiere reveals that, at present, 200,000 horse power is going to waste. It is proposed to construct reservoirs higher up to hold back this surplus water, so that it can be distributed in the seasons of low water.

The Dominion government appropriated $50,000 for a survey of the upper stretches, and it is hoped, an early start will be made on the work.

A heavy snow storm has been in progress here, to-day, and while it has not yet obstructed traffic, it has added greatly to the discomfort of the people, and is anything but spring-like.

The government is not prepared to recommend the formation of a military council in Canada, such as was recently appointed in England. But the minister of militia has gone a step in the direction of the English reform by providing for the appointment of an officer to inspect the militia. This change appears among a number of amendments to the militia act, of which Sir Frederick Borden gives notice.

The government is not prepared to recommend the formation of a military council in Canada, such as was recently appointed in England. But the minister of militia has gone a step in the direction of the English reform by providing for the appointment of an officer to inspect the militia. This change appears among a number of amendments to the militia act, of which Sir Frederick Borden gives notice.

The government is not prepared to recommend the formation of a military council in Canada, such as was recently appointed in England. But the minister of militia has gone a step in the direction of the English reform by providing for the appointment of an officer to inspect the militia. This change appears among a number of amendments to the militia act, of which Sir Frederick Borden gives notice.

The government is not prepared to recommend the formation of a military council in Canada, such as was recently appointed in England. But the minister of militia has gone a step in the direction of the English reform by providing for the appointment of an officer to inspect the militia. This change appears among a number of amendments to the militia act, of which Sir Frederick Borden gives notice.

The government is not prepared to recommend the formation of a military council in Canada, such as was recently appointed in England. But the minister of militia has gone a step in the direction of the English reform by providing for the appointment of an officer to inspect the militia. This change appears among a number of amendments to the militia act, of which Sir Frederick Borden gives notice.

The government is not prepared to recommend the formation of a military council in Canada, such as was recently appointed in England. But the minister of militia has gone a step in the direction of the English reform by providing for the appointment of an officer to inspect the militia. This change appears among a number of amendments to the militia act, of which Sir Frederick Borden gives notice.

The government is not prepared to recommend the formation of a military council in Canada, such as was recently appointed in England. But the minister of militia has gone a step in the direction of the English reform by providing for the appointment of an officer to inspect the militia. This change appears among a number of amendments to the militia act, of which Sir Frederick Borden gives notice.

The government is not prepared to recommend the formation of a military council in Canada, such as was recently appointed in England. But the minister of militia has gone a step in the direction of the English reform by providing for the appointment of an officer to inspect the militia. This change appears among a number of amendments to the militia act, of which Sir Frederick Borden gives notice.

The government is not prepared to recommend the formation of a military council in Canada, such as was recently appointed in England. But the minister of militia has gone a step in the direction of the English reform by providing for the appointment of an officer to inspect the militia. This change appears among a number of amendments to the militia act, of which Sir Frederick Borden gives notice.

The government is not prepared to recommend the formation of a military council in Canada, such as was recently appointed in England. But the minister of militia has gone a step in the direction of the English reform by providing for the appointment of an officer to inspect the militia. This change appears among a number of amendments to the militia act, of which Sir Frederick Borden gives notice.

The government is not prepared to recommend the formation of a military council in Canada, such as was recently appointed in England. But the minister of militia has gone a step in the direction of the English reform by providing for the appointment of an officer to inspect the militia. This change appears among a number of amendments to the militia act, of which Sir Frederick Borden gives notice.

The government is not prepared to recommend the formation of a military council in Canada, such as was recently appointed in England. But the minister of militia has gone a step in the direction of the English reform by providing for the appointment of an officer to inspect the militia. This change appears among a number of amendments to the militia act, of which Sir Frederick Borden gives notice.

The government is not prepared to recommend the formation of a military council in Canada, such as was recently appointed in England. But the minister of militia has gone a step in the direction of the English reform by providing for the appointment of an officer to inspect the militia. This change appears among a number of amendments to the militia act, of which Sir Frederick Borden gives notice.

The government is not prepared to recommend the formation of a military council in Canada, such as was recently appointed in England. But the minister of militia has gone a step in the direction of the English reform by providing for the appointment of an officer to inspect the militia. This change appears among a number of amendments to the militia act, of which Sir Frederick Borden gives notice.

The government is not prepared to recommend the formation of a military council in Canada, such as was recently appointed in England. But the minister of militia has gone a step in the direction of the English reform by providing for the appointment of an officer to inspect the militia. This change appears among a number of amendments to the militia act, of which Sir Frederick Borden gives notice.

The government is not prepared to recommend the formation of a military council in Canada, such as was recently appointed in England. But the minister of militia has gone a step in the direction of the English reform by providing for the appointment of an officer to inspect the militia. This change appears among a number of amendments to the militia act, of which Sir Frederick Borden gives notice.

The government is not prepared to recommend the formation of a military council in Canada, such as was recently appointed in England. But the minister of militia has gone a step in the direction of the English reform by providing for the appointment of an officer to inspect the militia. This change appears among a number of amendments to the militia act, of which Sir Frederick Borden gives notice.

The government is not prepared to recommend the formation of a military council in Canada, such as was recently appointed in England. But the minister of militia has gone a step in the direction of the English reform by providing for the appointment of an officer to inspect the militia. This change appears among a number of amendments to the militia act, of which Sir Frederick Borden gives notice.

The government is not prepared to recommend the formation of a military council in Canada, such as was recently appointed in England. But the minister of militia has gone a step in the direction of the English reform by providing for the appointment of an officer to inspect the militia. This change appears among a number of amendments to the militia act, of which Sir Frederick Borden gives notice.

The government is not prepared to recommend the formation of a military council in Canada, such as was recently appointed in England. But the minister of militia has gone a step in the direction of the English reform by providing for the appointment of an officer to inspect the militia. This change appears among a number of amendments to the militia act, of which Sir Frederick Borden gives notice.

The government is not prepared to recommend the formation of a military council in Canada, such as was recently appointed in England. But the minister of militia has gone a step in the direction of the English reform by providing for the appointment of an officer to inspect the militia. This change appears among a number of amendments to the militia act, of which Sir Frederick Borden gives notice.

The government is not prepared to recommend the formation of a military council in Canada, such as was recently appointed in England. But the minister of militia has gone a step in the direction of the English reform by providing for the appointment of an officer to inspect the militia. This change appears among a number of amendments to the militia act, of which Sir Frederick Borden gives notice.

The government is not prepared to recommend the formation of a military council in Canada, such as was recently appointed in England. But the minister of militia has gone a step in the direction of the English reform by providing for the appointment of an officer to inspect the militia. This change appears among a number of amendments to the militia act, of which Sir Frederick Borden gives notice.

The government is not prepared to recommend the formation of a military council in Canada, such as was recently appointed in England. But the minister of militia has gone a step in the direction of the English reform by providing for the appointment of an officer to inspect the militia. This change appears among a number of amendments to the militia act, of which Sir Frederick Borden gives notice.

The government is not prepared to recommend the formation of a military council in Canada, such as was recently appointed in England. But the minister of militia has gone a step in the direction of the English reform by providing for the appointment of an officer to inspect the militia. This change appears among a number of amendments to the militia act, of which Sir Frederick Borden gives notice.

The government is not prepared to recommend the formation of a military council in Canada, such as was recently appointed in England. But the minister of militia has gone a step in the direction of the English reform by providing for the appointment of an officer to inspect the militia. This change appears among a number of amendments to the militia act, of which Sir Frederick Borden gives notice.

The government is not prepared to recommend the formation of a military council in Canada, such as was recently appointed in England. But the minister of militia has gone a step in the direction of the English reform by providing for the appointment of an officer to inspect the militia. This change appears among a number of amendments to the militia act, of which Sir Frederick Borden gives notice.

The government is not prepared to recommend the formation of a military council in Canada, such as was recently appointed in England. But the minister of militia has gone a step in the direction of the English reform by providing for the appointment of an officer to inspect the militia. This change appears among a number of amendments to the militia act, of which Sir Frederick Borden gives notice.

The government is not prepared to recommend the formation of a military council in Canada, such as was recently appointed in England. But the minister of militia has gone a step in the direction of the English reform by providing for the appointment of an officer to inspect the militia. This change appears among a number of amendments to the militia act, of which Sir Frederick Borden gives notice.

The government is not prepared to recommend the formation of a military council in Canada, such as was recently appointed in England. But the minister of militia has gone a step in the direction of the English reform by providing for the appointment of an officer to inspect the militia. This change appears among a number of amendments to the militia act, of which Sir Frederick Borden gives notice.

The government is not prepared to recommend the formation of a military council in Canada, such as was recently appointed in England. But the minister of militia has gone a step in the direction of the English reform by providing for the appointment of an officer to inspect the militia. This change appears among a number of amendments to the militia act, of which Sir Frederick Borden gives notice.

The government is not prepared to recommend the formation of a military council in Canada, such as was recently appointed in England. But the minister of militia has gone a step in the direction of the English reform by providing for the appointment of an officer to inspect the militia. This change appears among a number of amendments to the militia act, of which Sir Frederick Borden gives notice.

The government is not prepared to recommend the formation of a military council in Canada, such as was recently appointed in England. But the minister of militia has gone a step in the direction of the English reform by providing for the appointment of an officer to inspect the militia. This change appears among a number of amendments to the militia act, of which Sir Frederick Borden gives notice.

The government is not prepared to recommend the formation of a military council in Canada, such as was recently appointed in England. But the minister of militia has gone a step in the direction of the English reform by providing for the appointment of an officer to inspect the militia. This change appears among a number of amendments to the militia act, of which Sir Frederick Borden gives notice.

The government is not prepared to recommend the formation of a military council in Canada, such as was recently appointed in England. But the minister of militia has gone a step in the direction of the English reform by providing for the appointment of an officer to inspect the militia. This change appears among a number of amendments to the militia act, of which Sir Frederick Borden gives notice.

The government is not prepared to recommend the formation of a military council in Canada, such as was recently appointed in England. But the minister of militia has gone a step in the direction of the English reform by providing for the appointment of an officer to inspect the militia. This change appears among a number of amendments to the militia act, of which Sir Frederick Borden gives notice.

The government is not prepared to recommend the formation of a military council in Canada, such as was recently appointed in England. But the minister of militia has gone a step in the direction of the English reform by providing for the appointment of an officer to inspect the militia. This change appears among a number of amendments to the militia act, of which Sir Frederick Borden gives notice.

The government is not prepared to recommend the formation of a military council in Canada, such as was recently appointed in England. But the minister of militia has gone a step in the direction of the English reform by providing for the appointment of an officer to inspect the militia. This change appears among a number of amendments to the militia act, of which Sir Frederick Borden gives notice.

The government is not prepared to recommend the formation of a military council in Canada, such as was recently appointed in England. But the minister of militia has gone a step in the direction of the English reform by providing for the appointment of an officer to inspect the militia. This change appears among a number of amendments to the militia act, of which Sir Frederick Borden gives notice.

The government is not prepared to recommend the formation of a military council in Canada, such as was recently appointed in England. But the minister of militia has gone a step in the direction of the English reform by providing for the appointment of an officer to inspect the militia. This change appears among a number of amendments to the militia act, of which Sir Frederick Borden gives notice.

When you buy Blue Ribbon Bexley Tea you get the best in the market and remember there can only be one best.

Ladies' English Rainproof Coats. The new season's smartest, made from the best materials by expert operators, well cut, carefully finished. Prices are $5, $5.95, $6.95, $7.50, $8.50, $8.75, $9.79, $10.50, $11.75.

Umbrellas. For Women, $1, $1.25, $1.50, $1.75, 75c., $2, $2.25, $2.50, $3. For Men, 50c., $1, 75c., $1.25, $1.50, $1.75, $2 up to $4. 2 Special Makes at $1 and $1.25. Children's School Umbrellas, 50c. and 75c.

Umbrellas Re-covered. If you have Umbrellas with expensive handles, or an Umbrella you like to carry, and the cover has become worn, do not throw them away. You can have them re-covered and made quite as good as new.

OUR LADIES' OXFORD SHOES. RANGING FROM $1 TO $2. Are Better than can usually be had for the money.

AND THEY'RE ALL NEW THE LOCKETT SHOE STORE.

Pedlar's "Perfect" Metal Lath. CHEAP AS WOOD. Delivered to any railway station in Canada for 10c. per square yard. Discount to dealers. Circulars and samples on request. Pedlar People, Oshawa, Can.

A Diamond Ring. Will make a beautiful and lasting gift. The ring we are offering at $75. Contains a fine, perfect Gem. We have all sizes and styles and will be pleased to have you call when interested in Diamonds. SPANGENBERG, Jeweller, King St. Phone 317.

Your Attention Brussels Carpets. Is specially drawn to the remarkable values which we are offering in Brussels Carpets. It has always been our aim to give value in every article, more particularly in the way of Carpets. Every yard will be found of the very best English manufacture. Owing to our determination to clear the lot we are offering them at Less Than Cost.

English Brussels Carpets. Very closely woven, handsome designs. Our usual price was $1.25; sale price, 85c. yard. Our usual price was $1.35; sale price, 95c. yard. Our usual price was $1.50; sale price, $1. yard.