GOT SIX YEARS.

PUNISHED FATHER TEACHING SON TO STEAL

Remarkable Story Told By The Lad-He Did Exactly As He Was Told-Lad Goes To Reformatory. London, May 6 .- Six years' penal

ervitude was the sentence passed man who had deliberately trained his burglar. The story told by the boy, Alfred George Everett, was of the most remarkable character. He lived with his parents, Edward and Sarah Ann Everett, at Enfield. In selecting houses for his son to enter Everett chose those at which he had worked as a painter, and the interiors which he consequently, knew. His structions were minute and clear, On one occasion, the boy related, his father said to him: "The window. I said, "Yes, that will out of the way of the police." then got a white-handled knife two pieces of wood, and placing the knife between the pieces of wood showed me how to force the catch back and said, "When that is done you can get in at the window, then take your boots off. Then when you think it is past six o'clock come out walk quick, as if you are going to work, and then walk straight The lad did exactly as he was told. He got into the grounds of a house known as Holmeside at night, waited until five o'clock in the morning, and entered by forcing the catch of drawing-room window. He carried the booty home to his father, who sold it for five shillings and gave him two-pence for himself.

On the next occasion he broke into Holmescroft, which adjoins Holmeside, in a similar way, and among the things which he took away in a sack was a piece of Christmas pudding "That ain't much," was his father's comment on the fruits of the robbery Twelve days later, the lad made his third essay in burglary, taking a bag and a knife with him. He was captured on leaving by a constable, and, true to orders he had received, he tried his best to mislead the police to shield his father. The mother was acquitted on the charge of receiving stolen goods. The lad was sent to a reformatory for four years.

HEAD BROKE STEAM GAUGE. Horrible Way Man Was Scalded to

Carleton Place, May 6 .- William Hall, of Addison, Leeds, count -- travelling agent for the George White & Sons Engine company, of London, Ont., was accidentally killed here. A traction engine belonging to Andrew Cram was being used to draw a heavy load, and Mr. Hall was assisting in running the engine. A sudden movement over a slight obstruction, seems to have thrown Mr. Hall against the end of the machine, where he was severely crushed between it and the heavy truck or the steam launch that was loaded upon it. His body struck against the glass water guage at the end of engine boiler and the steam and water rushing out of the broken tube scalded the unfortunate man's body in a frightful manner.
