The London Evening News says: Lord Massereene, whose second daughwas married yesterday, is the first man who would be sought out were home rule with a separate parliament ever granted to Ireland. For in his keeping at Antrim Castle are the mace and speaker's chair of the old Irish parliament. He is the great grandson of that John Foster, Lord Oriel, who was the last speaker of the Irish parliament, and who so bitterly opposed the union. After the historic meeting at which the parliament passed, Foster refused to give up the mace. "Un til that body that entrusted it to my keeping demand it," he said, "I will reserve it for them."
