James Thompson married Jane Tuley some years ago. James Millar married Jane's sister. When Jane died Thompson married her mother. This is the problem: What relationship does Thompson now bear to his deceased wife's sister, and what kin is his present wife to his former sister-in-law? Solution of the problem is guaranteed to produce acute dementia.

THE BOSTON LETTER.

Memorial Day Celebrated—East Boston Tunnel.

Special letter to the Whig. Boston, Mass., May 31.—Another day of memory to our dead heroes is over. Yesterday was Memorial Day, as manifested by the elaborate memorials, decorations of monuments and graves of dead soldiers. Each company or regiment looked after its dead comrades and each monument had a wreath and flags placed upon it. The different companies paraded through the city with muffled drums, and the day was celebrated solemnly with true patriotic fervor. The afternoon was practically spoiled for amusement owing to a very heavy rain, which made it a harvest day for the theatres. The seaside resorts put on special attractions for the day and drew large crowds. It is days like this that Americans take pride in celebrating for the refreshing of incidents in the young generation's memory of what their grand-parents did to win the perfect freedom which they now enjoy.

The much-talked-of East Boston tunnel is nearing completion, and it is stated on good authority that the first cars will be run some time during June. It is all completed but the track laying, which is progressing as fast as can be expected if no accidents occur. One can ride under the harbor without charge! What a boon it will be to "Y" residents of East Boston! —EDWIN PARKER.

WON AND LOST

UMPIRE'S DECISION IN VENEZUELAN DISPUTE.

Eleven Countries Involved—Railway and Government Monetary Claims Granted England.

Los Angeles, June 2.—Frank Plumley, of Vermont, to lay delegate to the general conference of the Methodist church, according to the Times, has just forwarded to the British and Venezuelan governments, through their respective ambassadors, his decision as umpire in the dispute between these countries.

Eleven different countries were involved, including Great Britain, Germany, Italy, Holland, Spain, Mexico and the United States. Great Britain, Holland and Venezuela joined in asking President Roosevelt to appoint an umpire to settle the point involved on which they could agree. Some of the points which Mr. Plumley was asked to decide were new in international jurisprudence and he was permitted to take the evidence to this country for further consideration.

Mr. Plumley now outlines the results of his deliberations. There were four awards, one involving a large sum of money, and the others dealing with important questions of international law. In one case regarding the payment of interest on awards, there was no precedent. It is a new step in international jurisprudence. The two remaining questions were covering the question of citizenship where the laws of the contending countries were not uniform and well settled.

The decision rendered by Mr. Plumley were among the most important and far-reaching which came before any of the commissions at the Caracas convention. These awards are the last to be made, and as by mutual agreement his decision is to be final and conclusive, the last vestige of the Venezuelan dispute has now passed away. The first of the awards was in the celebrated case between the Puerto Cabello and Valencia railway, a powerful British company, and the Venezuelan government which guaranteed a certain income which was not made good. The umpire made an award in favor of the company, of $1,200,000.

Most interesting from a legal standpoint, was the decision in regard to a claim by Great Britain for interest at five per cent. upon awards made by a mixed commission, in 1879; the convention constituting this commission, having provided that the Venezuelan government should by its congress make payment of these awards. There was a delay in the payments, covering some sixteen years. Venezuela denied the right to collect interest there was no specific provision for it by the two governments. Mr. Plumley held that interest at the rate of three per cent. the Venezuelan statutory rate, when no rate is named in the contract, should be allowed from the time the Venezuelan congress ratified the terms of the contract, accepted the findings of the committee and made the first payment on account.

Regarding the dispute as to citizenship, England set up the claim, that a man born in Venezuela, of British parents residing in Venezuela and always residing himself in Venezuela, was a British subject under the constitution of Venezuela existing at the time of his birth. This construction of the constitution, Venezuela opposed and insisted that the man was a Venezuelan by birth and domicile. The latter contention was sustained by the umpire.

In the last count, Great Britain urged that if case of a British subject domiciled in Venezuela, and who died there and who was married to a Venezuelan woman, such widow became a British subject by such marriage and retained her standing after his death and could appear as a claimant for a cause accruing to her husband in his lifetime. The umpire denied this claim.
