Not Fair To The Nurses. There is a strong feeling among the friends of the General Hospital nurses that they should not be expected by the board of governors to assume the heavy task of cleaning the institution. Special provision should be made for the disinfecting, and the strength of the nurses not taxed by rough manual labor involved in cleaning walls, woodwork, floors and furniture. That is not in the programme of their training, of which they are losing much just now. The greatest care is exercised in the choice of nurses for the institution, and even at this particular time that fact should be re membered. In order to save expense, the nurses' services may be utilized much against their will, but a very marked dissatisfaction will exist in many quarters.
