Clash Close To Liao-Yang.

Kantowin (seven miles south-east of Liao-Yang), Aug. 27.—The Japanese are advancing along the whole line of the Russian eastern front. On August 24th there was a rifle skirmish and the next day the Japanese artillery opened fire.

On the morning of August 26th, however, the rifle and artillery fire was renewed with an energy that left no doubt that a severe battle was intended.

The Japanese pushed their attack against the Russian right flank and centre, concentrating their fire upon the first battery of the 3rd brigade. Three officers and several men were wounded early in the day, but the battery held its position and repulsed the Japanese fire with such marked effect that Gen. Ivanoff (who commands the late Gen. Gontscharoff's corps) sent a congratulatory message to its commander.

The Japanese several times attempted to cross the Tankeho (Liank) river, but only a few succeeded, and these were forced to hide in the fields of Chinese corn.

At 2 p.m. the artillery fire became as hot as it was at Yafangow, but it fluctuated considerably and occasionally the Russian fire almost silenced that of the Japanese.

Rain fell in torrents at four o'clock but it did not stop the fighting and late in the evening several Russian companies moved forward to the attack. It is claimed that the Russians were successful. There is a prospect of more fighting.

Have Joined Forces.

Liao Yang, Aug. 27.—Gen. Kuroki has joined forces with Gen. Oka in a corps to cut the Russians' line between Anshanchan and Lianchienshan.
