FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER

Unsuccessful in Crossing force to the right bank of the Taitse river, and it, therefore, became necessary for the Russians to repel a blow in this direction. In view of this development in the operations, Gen. Kouropatkin decided to abandon his positions on the left bank, to concencentrate his whole army on the other side of the river. This position is one of the strongest both in character and in site. The great issue will be finally decided there. By with-drawing to the position the Russian army avoids the danger of being divided by the river, and enjoys the advantage of compactness. Kouropatkin's move, therefore, is not to be regarded as a retreat, but the carrying out of a well-defined idea.
The withdrawal of the Russians to the right bank involved the abandon ment of Liso Yang, which is situated on the left bank. The Japanese took advantage of this to occupy the city, but the sternest part of the fighting before them, unless It is more than likely, however, that | gall as auditor-general. he will decide to fight to a finish.
