I cannot describe the conclusion of peace as an impenditer his conclusion. "It is possible that the war may end ing event, but as a contingency that widow may be realized much sooner than ter her cople suppose. Mediation will not marrie that the campaign must end as the battle of Liao Yang ended, in costly woman sacrifice on both sides and a decisive advantage to neither. The alternative a large may be formulated thus : Either the and a ruin of Japan, purchased by ruinous sacrifices, or a treaty of cordial friendship, to be followed in the fullness of time by that offensive and defensive alliance which for years has constituted the ideal of the Japanese government. The problem is now being attentively studied in quarters where the will and the deed will follow each other at very short intervals, and as the data for sound opinion is abundant, it is possible, and perhaps probable, that peace will be arranged sooner than most people imagine.
