BROADBRIM'S

Letter From Greater New York.

TWO PARTIES

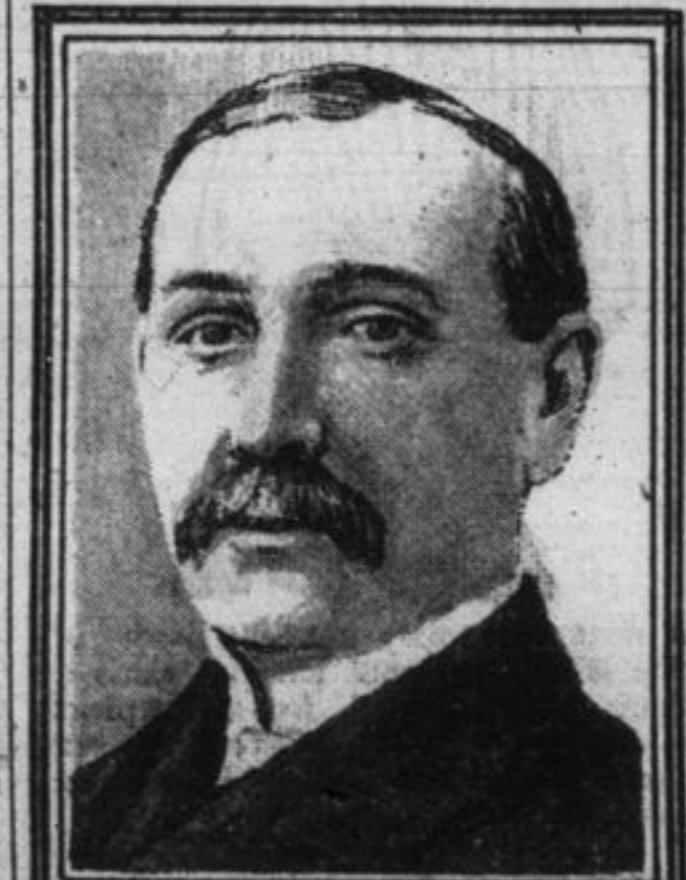

WRANGLE OVER U.S. POLICY IN PHILIPPINES.

New Subway, Great Triumph Of Peace—350,000 Passengers In One Day—Britain's Blood-Red Flag Protects Peasant As Well As Lord.

Special correspondent. Letter No. 1,482. New York, Nov. 4.—The nearer we approach election day the more difficult it seems to be to understand the differences between the two great parties which are reaching forth for power to rule this grand republic for the next four years. One of the principal points in the present political war is a man of great intelligence and supposed sound judgment, a man whose utterances ought to be relied on for the great issues at stake are grave and potential. Relying on figures which have been furnished him by one whom he trusts and he tells us that the most important feature now before

New York's population in 1836; and more gratifying than anything else connected with the opening is the fact that this tremendous army was carried through the subway without a single accident.

When New York was receiving from abroad hundreds of thousands of people, anxious to make the United States their home, the question that stood before us and had to be answered was, what shall we do with them? where shall we put them? The Island of Manhattan was an insignificant plot of ground and no place for a mighty population; but the question was settled by the answer I received from a ranchman in California. The scene was a lovely valley about twenty miles long and ten broad. The grass grew abundant and rich; I had a few head of cattle, my mining had not been a success, and I thought I would settle down to agriculture. Looking around in the far distance I saw a shack; it was not worthy of the name of house but I served as a shelter for the owner of this grand domain. I rode up and found the proprietor standing in the door of his shack and saluted him with the usual greeting, "Business, Boss Senator," to which he replied "Bum!" I told him I thought of settling down there and asked how far his shack extended. "Well, stranger," he replied, "I own all the land up and all beyond." This was about the case with New York; Manhattan was not much of an island it is true, but it claimed all that it wanted and in less than a hundred years it had marked out a city which might be the home of happy millions enjoying all the advantages which our advancing civilization gives to the population of the United States to-day. Only last week one of those mighty ocean Leviathans landed at a single wharf over three thousand passengers that is about the population of a good sized country town and as I remarked a few moments ago, the question was, where shall we put them? We have a submarine gate and we will send the invaders. Happily we may be able to turn some of this vast throng away. It is only a few weeks ago we sent back a band of gypsies three hundred strong. One of the most laughable circumstances that ever took place in the commission occurred a week ago, an Italian sent his wife and two children back to Italy on a visit, and while she was away he fell in love with an Italian, and sat down to think of how he could get lawfully rid of wife number one and the children. So learning that she had started from Italy with the "kids" he went down to the emigrant camp, mission and gave them his name with a full description of herself and the children and swore that her left lung was all gone and that it was a victim of galloping consumption. The commission's detectives kept a sharp eye for the incoming steamer; they found the woman and the children but instead of being a victim of galloping consumption she was the healthiest looking foreigner that you would find between New York and Chicago. The children were American citizens born on this soil. The commission was compelled to open its gates and let her in. She is young and strong and if she does not make her faithless husband's life a hell in ten days when he tried to play her off to a dying consumptive and tried to turn our virtuous emigrant commission into a divorce court then I am mistaken in the woman.

CONGRESSMAN JAMES A. HEMENWAY.

Of Indianapolis, who succeeds "Uncle Joe" Cannon as chairman of the ways and means committee of the house, has the support of Senator Fairbanks in his candidacy to succeed Fairbanks in the United States Senate. He is elected Vice-President.

The American public is American, rule in the Philippines. He tells us that already we have sacrificed two hundred thousand lives and further that the barbarities practiced on the innocent natives, if found to be true, will fill a dark page in the history of the world. Towns are deserted, agriculture neglected, no employment for the people to earn an honest living and to all appearances the Philippines seems to be going to ruin. Fortunately there are two sides to every question. We learn from the commission that in the Philippines that the conditions there are rapidly improving. Diseases which have helped to desolate the country are being exterminated by scientific treatment. The terrible scourge of small-pox which has almost depopulated many quarters in these islands is vanishing before improved systems of treatment. Exports are increasing, imports are improving, good policing is insuring the peace of the towns and the hands of robbers which swarmed on every highway, are being driven down to the Ladronez, or are seeking more peaceful employment in the fields of agriculture. One party declares that the only solution of this tremendous question is to give to the Philippines absolute independence the same as was accorded to Cuba. The other party declares to give them independence now would be to throw them back into the barbarous condition from which they are now so happily emerging. When properly prepared for self government no doubt they will be well come to the congress of nations, the civilization of which is the glory of the world to-day.

But mingled with the sorrows of war, in New York, we are called upon to celebrate one of the grandest triumphs of peace in the history of our republic. Our magnificent new subway is open; it is no longer a question of probabilities, but a living and working fact. Its first day's record is three hundred and fifty thousand passengers which is about the record of

SCIATICA CURED

ANOTHER TRIUMPH FOR DR. WILLIAMS' PINK PILLS.

Mr. Etsell, of Walkerton, Suffered For Months And Got No Relief Until He Began The Use of These Pills.

Of the many employees of R. Triax & Co., Walkerton, Ont., none stands higher in the confidence of his employers than does Thomas J. Etsell. He is an excellent mechanic, and has been in the employ of this firm for upwards of ten years. But although Mr. Etsell now ranks among the strong men who are never absent from their posts of duty, the time was when he was often absent as present, all because of physical inability to perform his work.

During these years, Mr. Etsell, as many readily will imagine, was continually on the lookout for some remedy that would rid him of the disability, but for a long time without success. Doctors were consulted and all that he suffered from sciatica, and at times the suffering became so intense that for days he was unable to leave his house.

The cure of Mr. Etsell proves that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are not an ordinary medicine, and that their power to cure all troubles of the blood or nerves places them beyond all other medicines. You can get these pills from any medicine dealer or direct by mail, at 50c a box or six boxes for $2.50 by writing The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont. See that the full name, "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People," is printed on the wrapper around every box.

Took A Green Glow. Fredland, Pa., Nov. 5.—Nearly 2,000 volts of electricity passed through the body of John Cunningham, and, as a result, he will recover. He had grasped a live wire. His body glowed like a mass of green fire, and sparks emerged from his mouth and nostrils till he fell to the ground.

PHONE'S USE.

A Writer Says It Tends To Make Us Lazy.

A few generations, perhaps, will develop the American into a "left hand" writes Elizabeth Banks in "The Sketch." Their left ears will be abnormally acute in the matter of hearing, while their right ears will be small, ornamental appendages, totally deaf, and of no practical use whatever. I have come to this conclusion after an eight months' tour of my native country—especially the west—only this observation of telephone, its uses and its effects.

In the days to come the Americans will have forgotten how to write. Even now, and in the past, they never could pose as model letter writers. They can converse, brightly and interestingly, if they will take the time; but the average American letter is brief, to the point, abrupt and frequently rude. In the future they will not write any letters at all. This will be the result of the omnipresent telephone.

Few love letters are now written in the western part of America. Love-letters couples only 400 miles apart merely call one another when they feel lonely. The maiden in her bedroom has her telephone on a table beside her bed. The lover has his also close at hand. She rings him up at five o'clock in the morning or he rings her up.

"Good morning, darling! How are you?" "Is that you sweetheart? Why, you woke me up out of a sound sleep! I was dreaming of you!" "It's the same. Why, I was dreaming about you! I shall go to sleep again now, because it's too early to get up. Good-by!"

In some cities, especially in the State of California, the telephone is so cheap that many families have a switch in every room, or they carry the wire so long that they can have it from one room to another. And not only is this the case, but for the poorest villagers and farmers have their telephone service.

At the telephone the housewife, immediately after breakfast sits down comfortably to do her shopping and marketing. In the afternoon she also sits there and does most of her visiting. She calls up friend after friend, has a chat, rings off. As for going out, for 20 to one, none of the women in her set keeps a servant, and so, if they are out, the telephone bell rings all unheeded.

The most popular telephone is that which requires no ringing up of central. I found it used extensively in the state of Nebraska. By means of it you are your own central, ringing up your friends direct. It, too, is cheap, ranging from a dollar to two dollars a month.

Every business man has his telephone directly on his desk. Authors, doctors, lawyers, clerks, shopkeepers seem to think nothing of the interruptions in their work that would drive an Englishman distracted. For a good half of the day their left ears are at the telephone.

School houses, of course, have their telephones. The teacher, going to answer the ring, is confronted with "Miss Simpson. I can't see Johnnie today. Will you excuse him?" "Johnnie is excused, and thus Mrs. Smith is saved the trouble of writing a letter.

I have a friend who has been acting as secretary to a revivalist and has been travelling about with him to the various camp meetings this summer. Every morning, after a heavy revival, when scores of "seekers" had stood up and asked for prayers on the evening before, the revivalist handed the secretary a list of names and addresses, and said: "Just call up each one of these brothers and sisters, ask them how they go with their souls, and tell them to keep on praying and that I'm praying for them right along."

It is almost impossible to get attention paid to a business letter written by yourself, or to get a properly written business letter in reply, in any language, in any part of the world, unless you are in the same town. You are expected to have a telephone and make use of it, even though, being in a hotel where the price is ten cents for every message, you scarcely feel able to afford the expense. I should state that ten cents is the price for using hotel telephones in New York and the large eastern cities. In Chicago it is five cents, and out in Los Angeles, Cal., it is nothing. There you are welcome to use anybody's telephone. Not only does it contribute to laziness, it interferes with reverence and sentiment. An engaged girl whose lover lives in a town twenty miles distant confided to me the other day that she had never, during the two years of her engagement, had a solitary love letter or written one. "We just call each other up a dozen times a day," she said, "and we say all our nice things that way."

Herb W. Edwards Injured. Herb W. Edwards of Des Moines, Iowa, got a fall on an icy walk last winter, spraining his wrist and bruising his knee. "The next day," he says, "they were so sore and stiff I was afraid I would have to stay in bed, but I rubbed them well with Chamberlain's Pain Balm, and after a few applications all soreness had disappeared." For sale by all druggists.

Lover's T-Z (Wise Head) Disinfectant Soap Powder is better than other powders, as it is both soap and disinfectant. Henry Cunningham, piano tuner, from Chicago's Opus received at McAuley's book store, Princess Street. The fellow who succeeds in bottling up his wrath is a corker.
