HOW IT HAPPENED.

The Loss Of The Schooner Annie Falconer. The particulars of the wreck of the schooler Annie Falconer, as told by a Picton man this afternoon, are: he schooner Falconer was owned and miled by Captain Ackerman, Picton, and a grew of six men from Picton. The schooner was coal-laden from Sodus Point, N.Y., to Picton, and loring her voyage encountered bad weather, which eventually strained ser timbers so badly that at about three o'clock Saturday afternoon, she sprang a-leak and foundered off the False Ducks off South Bay Point, She sank in about fifty feet of water eaving only her cross trees visible above the water. The crew took warning in time and got away in the ife boat, After six hours hard struggle with the high wind and heavy sens they reached the shores of Am-herst Island, at nine o'clock Saturday oars at him and then jumping from the herst Island, at nine o clock Saturday boat, which was fastened to the tensely from any course all suffering intensely from exposure and one of their number, James Sultivan, was in nelpless condition.
