THE CLASSICS

NECESSARY TO A PERSON'S EDUCATION.

Latin Grammar Simpler Than English—Classics Train Mind, and Correct Imperger Forms of Speech—Give the English Pronunciation.

Written for the Whig. More or less discussion crops up from time to time, as to the desirability of the usual Latin and Greek in schools.

The merits of these dead languages as a means for good education, seem to me beyond question. To begin with, much less labor is required, inasmuch as Latin and Greek cover most of the ground necessary for English grammar, ancient history and geography, mythology, poetry, rhetoric, and many other studies, besides giving vast information as to the English language and literature.

The study of the present text books of English grammar appears far more laborious and intricate than the requirements of the requisite knowledge of Latin and Greek, to obtain not only the same results, but a much better conception of our own language, which should include the derivations and meanings of words, as well as a vast amount of information of a highly useful and refining nature.

What is the reason that English is usually spoken so ungrammatically? Simply because Latin and Greek are not invariably taught, and the untrained mind is tangled up with trying to worry out a complicated system of critical analysis of the English language as depicted in the ordinary grammars, each new edition of which is more complicated than the previous one, and impresses one with the idea that its author was treating the subject upon the lines of analytical chemistry.

Over and over two public school students of, say fifteen years of age, not long ago, conversing about their late examinations, and one said to the other, "I don't understand German any way." This is a result of the present system. I admit that no system will cause anyone to speak grammatically who rarely hears good English spoken, but I maintain that no one with a mere smattering of Latin and Greek would have used the expression quoted.

In the study of Latin and Greek, the student is building up a foundation, and grasping most of the ingredients which compose our language and literature, whilst without them he is endeavoring to learn their ramifications, and does not discover, nor understand the sources from which they emanate, and he frequently develops into a mere spout, rather than a fountain.

For the simplest method of acquiring a knowledge of the classics, and English generally, for a polite and liberal education, for refinement of mind and manners, and for much information necessary to a gentleman, means, commend me to Latin and Greek. Give me honest "Eonus, Bona, Bonum," every time before the "advertising" of the "medicines," and some other such entanglement, and pronounce Latin and Greek as an Englishman should, instead of as a foreigner. The absurd pronunciation of Latin in the continental style seems to render it as difficult as possible to be of service. The use of Latin and Greek is to learn English subjects, and the nearer they approach to the sound, quantity and inflection of English, the closer will be the connection with the sympathy and understanding of the student. This, it signifies how these old languages were pronounced? We are not studying them except as a means to an end. No one knows how to pronounce Latin, or Greek, or in literature, no one cares, the nearer to English the better for Englishmen, the nearer to French, German, and all work in harmony. As it is now under this new fad, one ought to study two or three modern languages before commencing classics at all. Verily, a case of the tail wagging the dog. How can young men become accomplished in Latin and Greek, if they are to be taught without classics? True, they may obtain their diplomas in dog-Latin, but they must depend largely upon sheer memory, and are badly handicapped when they come to phrase, term, or science turns up their scholarship must appear of a rough description—mere knowledge of fact in a small, part of the classics, it is the training of the mind through their agency which tells the story, and all the smatterings of all the "ologies" I venture to say, will never be able to compare with a tithes of their proficiency.

Latin is simpler than English in its parts of speech, genders, cases, etc., more easily determined, the rules of syntax better defined, and its whole construction more uniform, so that a knowledge of it opens up to the student's mind a complete revelation of the English language—it assists in the forming of a judicial mind, gives precision and exactness, and caps the whole with golden sentences. Latin is never forgotten in after life which is one of its greatest virtues, so that it constantly acts as a corrective, over the complexities of a modern English grammar, and extract any permanent benefit therefrom, is beyond my comprehension, and as a matter of fact, I do not believe that one in a thousand in after life could pass a primary examination in it.

The immense number of Anglicized words taken from Latin and Greek, the profusion of quotations in literature, science, and art, and ordinary conversations, the expressions, impossible to convey in English words or idiom, and a host of other aids to thought and expression, should be conclusive proof of the high position in which these ancient tongues must ever stand, and the attempt to teach English in all its forms without them does not seem possible.

NOT FOR BEST FARM

In the State. "I saw so much in the papers about the wonderful cures effected by Pyramid Pile Cure, I determined to give it a trial."

"I saw so much in the papers about the wonderful cures effected by Pyramid Pile Cure, I determined to give it a trial. I bought from my druggist one fifty cent box and used it as directed, and by the time I had used the last 'pyramid' I was entirely cured; in four days after I began to use the 'pyramid' all inflammation was gone. I was perfectly easy all the time, the excessive discharge stopped at once, and stools became easy and gentle."

"I was unable to get my own firewood for four months, and half the time when I could walk at all I had to walk half bent. I used many pile remedies, salves and ointments, all to no effect until I used one fifty cent box of Pyramid Pile Cure and was cured."

"I would not be afflicted as I was four months ago for the best farm in the state of Arkansas. I can give proof and reference of the wonderful cure to all who are afflicted as I was. Please publish my letter that I may advise the afflicted. W. E. Wallis, Piggot, Ark., Box 26."

The experience of Mr. Wallis is that of thousands of others who suffer for years with the most painful forms of hemorrhoids, or piles, and after trying everything they hear of, give up all hope of a cure and look for temporary relief. To all such a little book published by Pyramid Drug Co., Marshall, Mich., brings glad tidings, as it tells all about the cause and cure of piles, and is sent free for the asking.

LUNATIC'S HORRIBLE DEED.

Mutilated Himself on Visit to Relatives. Montreal, Nov. 24.—John Arnold, a lunatic, mutilated himself in a most horrible manner at Greenville, N. B., when he was on his way to visit relatives. He secured an axe and cut off his left hand at the wrist, then splitting his foot open at the instep, and hacked the toes of his right foot. When discovered Arnold was coolly proceeding to mutilate himself further. It was with difficulty that his life was saved, as the flow of blood was so great. He was brought to the Royal Victoria Hospital, where he now lies in a critical condition.

Rheumatism Can Be Cured.

The fact that a disease has been difficult to cure is not proof that it cannot be readily cured. All diseases were hard to cure until the right remedies were found. Rheumatism—all kinds—can be cured with Dr. Hall's Rheumatic Cure. The remedy has been tested for years. It has cured hundreds of cases that nothing else would ever relieve. No sufferer is fair to himself who tries this remedy. This is the preparation that cured John J. Peters, Sharbot Lake, and hundreds of others. In bottles, 50c., at Wade's drug store.

Too Poor To Drink Tea.

London, Nov. 24.—For three years the Indian Tea Markets Expansion Committee have been trying to foster tea-drinking among the poorer people of India, writes our Calcutta correspondent. In a report they have just issued 360 tons of tea have been sold. Over 5,000,000 attractive packages of tea were offered for sale in 3,000 villages, and tea was brewed in various centres and distributed free. Altogether 3,000,000 cups of the beverage were so dispensed.

The committee, after giving away 350 tons of the tea, have come to the conclusion that the masses they wished to reach cannot afford to pay more than 3d. a pound, and as this price offers little return to the growers they have discontinued the experiment.

Can't Afford Ill Health

Cure Is Cheap At Any Price—Benefit Certain if You Use

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

Only the wealthy can afford to be ill. They alone can bear the expense of constant attendance by doctors and high-salaried nurses.

Your daily task is in the home or abroad, you must make every day count or prove a burden to yourself and friends.

Weakness is the greatest source of ill-health. Weakness of the blood and nerves, weakness of action of the heart, lungs, and digestive organs.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food will suit to the needs of a multitude of people because it overcomes weakness, first weakness of the blood and nerves, and through these the weakness of the organs of the body.

It may require a dozen or more boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to make you strong and well and send the thrill of health through your shrivelled arteries and wasted nerves.

Because Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is a creator of blood and nerve force you can be positive that each box of it is at least doing you some good. Prove this by noting your increase in weight as new firm flesh and tissue is being added to the body.

J. W. Groves, a soldier, living at 265 Johnston street, Kingston, Ont., states: "I have suffered a great deal with pain in my back and my nerves have been very unsteady. Since having used several boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I can say that I found this remedy most helpful to me. My nervous system has been toned up, the pain in my back have entirely disappeared, and I feel better in every way. I hope that others who see this statement of mine will be equally benefited by the use of this excellent medicine."

Vagrant Has $10 Dinner At Waldorf.

New York, Nov. 24.—Joseph R. May made his way to a corner of the cafe and grill room of the Waldorf-Astoria last night and called loudly for a waiter. To him May said: "See here, son, I'm no cheap sport. These people you are so busy with are four flushers and cheap. Now, pay particular attention to me and I'll fix you up. Are you listening?"

The waiter assured him that he undoubtedly deserved to be and should be well served. After consuming a Manhattan cocktail, a hot turkey sandwich, and a second cocktail, May scolded the waiter for not having ordered a club sandwich. He ate this, drank another cocktail and reprimanded the waiter. He also pounded on the table and made remarks uncomplimentary to persons seated at other tables.

In response to May's request for the highest price cigar in the establishment, the waiter took to him about the most expensive cigar in the store for practical purposes, such as chiefly sold to guests as souvenirs. May lighted it and then asked for a "charlotte-rose with a straw in it."

The waiter assured him that he undoubtedly deserved to be and should be well served. After consuming a Manhattan cocktail, a hot turkey sandwich, and a second cocktail, May scolded the waiter for not having ordered a club sandwich. He ate this, drank another cocktail and reprimanded the waiter. He also pounded on the table and made remarks uncomplimentary to persons seated at other tables.

May smoked his hip, black cigar for an hour and a half after being placed in a cell. He had no money.

The bail against him was about $10. The charge upon which he was locked up was vagrancy.

WEAR FALSE TEETH.

Any Deficiency Will No Longer Exempt Men.

London, Nov. 24.—Deficient teeth are not in the future to prevent the enlistment in the British army of otherwise suitable recruits. Would-be soldiers suffering from decayed teeth, must, however, be prepared to pay a sum not to exceed three pounds toward the expense of fitting them with artificial teeth.

So it is set forth in a circular by the secretary of the army council. Similarly, men who would be discharged from the army as unfit for further service owing to the state of their teeth, are to be retained on equivalent conditions, the sum to be paid the dentist to be stopped out of their pay.

The British Medical Journal commenting on this order says: "It is a step in the right direction. The Napoleonic dictum that an army marches on its stomach has been so long admitted as a military axiom that it seems strange that only now has effect been given to it. It is the South African war which has largely contrived to make the reform acceptable a glaring light having been thrown upon the losses which the army suffered through defective mastication, a large number of troops having to be kept at the base or sent home because the state of their teeth made it impossible for them to digest the rough food necessarily served to men at the front."

Sugar For Thin People.

A French chemist recently gave an interesting account of the value of sugar as a food in certain conditions of ill-health. In some experiments he carried out he found that, by giving from one and three-quarter ounces to ten ounces per day to emaciated people, a gain in weight averaging three and one-half ounces per day was the result, some of the patients even gaining over one pound each day. From his observations Dr. Toulouse found that the sugar was most beneficial when given in conjunction with a milk diet.
