In his younger days he wielded great influence at Oxford, and, indeed, still does so, frequently visiting the university as a "missionary," and securing some of the brightest undergraduates for service in the Church of England. He is only 51 years of age, and has had a remarkable career since he left Balliel College. After acting successively as Vice-Principal of Cuddesdon College, librarian of the Pusey Library, and Vicar Radley, he became in 1904 Canon of Westminster. He continued to reside and work in the metropolls until he was appointed to Worcester.

There lived in the village of Arreton, Isle of Wight, many years ago a young man who was betrothed to a young woman. Both were poor and in humble life, but the grandfather of the young man had money, and he fell in love with the young woman and proposed marriage to her. The girl told her lover. He was displeased, but, having pondered over the dilemma, saw a way to extricate himself and his sweetheart, from the same. "Marry him," said he to the girl. 'He is rich. He cannot live long. When he dies you'll have his money, and I'll have you." She took the advice. By the marriage she became the young man's grandmother.
