

Treated by Three Doctors for a Severe Attack of Dyspepsia, Got No Relief From Medicines, But Found It At Last In Burdock Blood Bitters.

Mrs. Frank Hutt, Morrisburg, Ont., was one of those troubled with this most common of stomach troubles. She writes: "After being treated by three doctors, and using many advertised medicines, for a severe attack of Dyspepsia, and receiving no benefit, I gave up all hope of ever being cured. Hearing Burdock Blood Bitters so highly spoken of, I decided to get a bottle, and give it a trial. Before I had taken it I began to feel better, and by the time I had taken the second one I was completely cured. I cannot recommend Burdock Blood Bitters too highly, and would advise all sufferers from dyspepsia to give it a trial."

THE HUNGER FOR OFFICE. The sober senses of some people are returning. Men are realizing that success at the polls, in a local election, does not involve a general disturbance of official relations, and that if such were the interpretation of the vote by the conservatives it might be followed by results not anticipated, or at least not desired, by them.

The spot where conservative opinion ought to be clear and unprejudiced is the committee room in Ottawa in which the members of parliament do congregate. Here they assembled on election night. Here they talked of the situation as it occurred to them. Here they gave expression to their feelings with candour and directness. Here it was hoped Mr. Whitney would indulge in the larger outlook. "He must remember," they reasoned, "that there are, other, that there are six provinces outside Ontario, and that the conservative party has chances in all of them which could be queried by Mr. Whitney's excessive use of power. Let offensive partisans be removed—oh, yes. Let the axe fall on the heels and the disreputable queue of petty grafters. But let the civil service be touched with the gentlest hand. The interests of the country must not suffer through a lack of experienced officials, and the prospects of the party must not be marred by stirring up influential resentments. The opinion is freely expressed in No. 6 that the Whitney administration cannot do better than emulate the wise forbearance of the Laurier government when it came in in 1896."

There was no exception made in this conclusion. It applied to all the officials, irrespective of when they were appointed. The argument that men appointed to office during a certain period are different from others appointed at an earlier date is not reasonable. Any dismissal from office, except for cause—except for neglect of duty or partisanship—would invite the resentment which the conservative members at Ottawa regard as most unwelcome.

THE AMERICANS SHOCKED. Some American journals are inclined to feel offended because Canada, or rather her government, is not disposed to talk up reciprocity. Conservative and liberal governments have had their experience.

Sir John Macdonald once went to the country with the proposition that if returned to power he would send an envoy to Washington, and that it would settle at once the question of closer relations between Canada and the United States. The American government scarcely recognized the deputation and certainly sent it back with the idea that the Americans did not desire reciprocity.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier's government has been willing to discuss the question on its merits, but the Americans have trifled with it, not once, but again and again, until the premier decided he would have no more to do with it. Then the Americans became anxious, and some representative men—men who have addressed commercial leagues, who have interviewed the president and organized generally—have pointed out that the success of imperial federation meant death to their plans and speculations.

"Our belated conversion to the idea of reciprocity," says Collier's Weekly, "is meeting with a cool reception in Canada. For the second time a suggestion by Senator Fairbanks that the joint high commission should be reconvened to consider trade relations has been politely shelved by Sir Wilfrid Laurier." Some hope is built up on the effect of the Hay-Bond treaty, but it is not very inspiring, particularly when it is noted that Lord Minto, in England, has been warning his countrymen to make up to Canada and secure its friendship and trade, on the ground that "the United States is seeking reciprocity with Canada in the hope of stealing her away from Great Britain."

Such an idea is repudiated by the newspaper from which we quote, but the fact is that American statesmen figure on capturing Canada's affections as a means of protecting her trade. Both the United States and England are bidding for Canada's commerce, and it is apparent that both cannot enjoy it, and Minto's idea is that the Motherland should so act that her colony will be drawn to her and share in her prestige and prosperity.

The Toronto Star says the election of the 25th was not a liberal defeat, but a liberal release of a government from power. Thousands of good liberals it says voted for a change of government, as a means of getting rid of the hangover, and of some associations, and the slate is now clear. The party is united again. Time will tell.

H. J. Myers, 60 Brock St.

WILL THERE BE A CHANGE? The worry of the politician now is also the liquor law and the manner of its enforcement. Mr. Whitney, during the campaign, intimated that there would be a change, from commissioners to some body which would not be influenced by politics. Since the voting the question has been canvassed, and all sorts of opinions have been expressed with regard to it. It has been suggested that the county warden, the county judge and one government representative be the board for the issue of licenses, and that they have the power to appoint and control the inspectors. That will do for the county. But what about the city or town? The mayor might take the place of the warden, and the judge might still be a member of the license board. Others have recommended that the commissioners be elected by popular vote, and that they be in no way connected with any other public body, at least that they be not members of council.

That the licensed victuallers had a great deal to do with recent election appears by the following, which is part of an interview with Mr. Haverson, the solicitor for the association: "The liquor interests as a whole voted against the Ross government because of the attitude of Mr. Ross and his party. The Globe continually asserted that the liberal party was the temperance party; that it alone had passed all the temperance legislation that had been enacted, and was the only party that would pass any such legislation, and that it was useless for the temperance party to look to Mr. Whitney for anything more than the license act. This was the premier's manifesto to the temperance people. "Taking the Globe and the premier on their own statements, there was nothing else for the liquor trade to do than to vote against the government. If the temperance people voted for Mr. Whitney, which I very much doubt, they were moved by feelings of vengeance. The liquor trade was animated by no such motive or feeling. It was a business proposition and what might reasonably be expected. The traditions of the conservative party are not against the liquor party, and we surely have some reason to believe Mr. Whitney when he says that his policy is the license act well enforced. "Let me just say that, whatever else may be said against the Ross government, the Ross administration cannot be charged that they did not enforce the liquor license act, which is as well enforced and as well observed as any law on the statute books, and those who assert the contrary don't know what they are talking about."

too, is the law of the land. Of course.

There are a few of the old guard who will hail the new regime with delight," says the Toronto World. "One official remarked that he had waited twenty-two years for the day when his friends would be back in power." Had the government been a tory one there would not have been a grit in office thirty-two days, much less years. The incident recites the forbearance of the liberals towards the conservative office holders.

TWO CHILDREN CREMATED. Mother Passes Little Ones From Window. Carthage, N.Y., Jan. 30.—Two children, aged four years and one week respectively, were burned to death in a house at Waukena, on Cranberry Lake railroad, Saturday. John Fostelle, a night watchman at a lumber mill, his wife was awakened by smoke and flames in her home. She rushed out in her night clothes, then broke a window and saved three of her children by passing them out of the window to neighbors. She made several attempts to reach the other two little ones, but was driven back by the flames, and they perished. The mother was badly burned.

Decorate King Charles' Statue. Special to the Whig. London, Jan. 30.—Two hundred and twenty-six years ago to-day, Charles I. was executed by his subjects, and latter-day Jacobites observed the anniversary as usual by placing wreaths on the statue in Trafalgar Square. That is to say, they would like to place these floral emblems personally, but had to relate the garlands are now always laid in position by the rude hands of Hanoverian policemen.

The reason for this is somewhat amusing. The observance started some fifteen years ago, and all would have gone well, but for a modest bunch of violets placed among the other decorations. It was not the flowers but the card to which they were attached, which caused the stir. This card was the white lid of a milliner's box linked round with a deep black border. In the centre were printed in large letters the words, "Remember! Oh, King and Martyr, We have Not Forgotten. Long Live Queen Mary." Next day there was a paragraph in all the papers calling attention to the "disloyal" inscription, and when parliament met a question was put to the home secretary. The consequence was the placing of Jacobite wreaths under the consponsorship of the office of works, where all tributes now have to be sent.
