THINGS THAT ARE QUITE QUEER

Andrew Land In Difficulties About The Ghostly Appearances And Doings of Those Still in Flesh

That the phantasms of the living may "walk" just as ghosts do I take to be certain, and give examples. A few weeks ago a lady of my kin, say, Miss FitzAllan, dressed very early for dinner (she was tastefully frocked in pink), and went into the drawing coom, where she sat writing letters. As she wrote she thought more than once of going to visit a sick friend in an establishment about a hundred yards distant. For an ordinary iomestic reason she did not go. To her enter a lady, resident in the aforesaid establishment, who had been invited to dinner. The lady gaped on her in amazement. As she left the door of the place where she lived, she explained, she had seen in front of her Miss FitzAllan, dressed in gray, walking in the direction whither she was going. She was about to say, "Mary you will be late for dinner." but, having only a back view of the appearance, she waited till they should come to the first corner, If the appearance in gray turned to the right at the corner she must be Miss FitzAllan, for that route led only to her front door. By the time ley reached the corner the guest was within touch of the appearance, which did go round the corner. Being thus certain that the appearance was input forth her hand to touch her on the shoulder. Personne! There was no body, no appearance, any more. The phantasm of Miss FitzAllan had been "walking" like a ghost where she herself merely thought of going. I could add largely to these ancedotes of the living who "walk; " indeed, I have seen three of them, of whom only one was dying when viewed him, a hundred miles away from his death bed. The two others (one of them was merely normal were not aware that they had been thinking of me, or of the places in which I saw them, my garden, in one case; in the other, the hall of an ancient house. What does puzzle me is the question-How do these appearances open doors, as they certainly seem to do? Is the door really shut and is its opening part of the hallucination? A lady of my friends, who is much too familiar with appearances to trouble herself about them, tells me that, when staying at an English country house, she saw "the funniest ghost I ever saw. I was standing at my dressing table, and looked round. The ghost was an ugly little flappy ghost, crumpled oose in a chair beside the fire. Now the funniest thing is that the chair was a ghost, too. There was not any chair in that part of the room.' Perhaps the opening door is "a ghost, too," or the opening of it is, for the door is there, all right. If we admit, then, that "the spirits of the living" can thus impress themselves on us, as if they were the actual people whom we know, may we not attribute similar impressions the presence of the dead to the agency of the spirits of the dead? In speaking of "spirits" I was flying in the face of science, of course, but our language, and "without prejudice." One cannot say that 'consciousness' of the liking is the agency which produces on us these can't be cured by medicine. Plenty of false impressions of the actual prefresh air, mild exercise and "The D. & sence of the living, because the liv-L." out from our description that the Very Prevalent Among Young person did exist, but is dead it does not follow that the dead man's consciousness is aware, any more than the living persons who appear are aware, usually, that their appearance have been "walking," and have been observed. Red Rose Tea

Because it is always fresh and sweet. My teas are shipped to St. John direct from where they grow, instead of being imported from London, where teas often lie in warehouse for several months. The sales of Red Rose Tea are so large that any one lot of tea seldom remains on hand more than a few weeks; fresh lots arrive by every steamer. Then, in the grocery store Red Rose Tea is never dead stock. Except where being first introduced, the demand is such that each shipment is sold in a very few weeks. From start to finish, Red Rose Tea is handled so that the consumer is sure to get it while it is fresh and sweet.
