GREAT SIGHT.

Crowds Go to See Canvass Of Electoral Vote.

WERE REPAID

BY AN IMPRESSIVE AND INTERESTING CEREMONY.

Finishing Touches On Election Of Roosevelt And Fairbanks—Certificate Of Votes By States—A Great Occasion.

Special to the Whig.

Washington, D.C., Feb. 8.—Thousands struggled for admittance today to the hall of the House of Representatives to witness the formal finishing touches on the election of Roosevelt and Fairbanks, or, in other words, the ceremony of canvassing the electoral vote.

Those who were successful in gaining entrance to the visitors' galleries were rewarded by the sight of one of the most impressive and interesting ceremonies prescribed by the constitution of the republic.

The two houses of congress met, as usual, at noon. For some time previous to that hour large crowds were to be seen swarming toward the capitol.

Up the marble stairways climbed the crowd. Arriving at the gallery entrances, the house visitors immediately by card to occupy the seats allotted by card to the general public.

Precisely at 1 o'clock, a messenger having notified the upper house that the lower was ready, the southern door of the senate chamber swung open and a procession of sages issued forth upon the mosaic floor of the corridor.

As an advance guard there was a platoon of capitol police, bringing up the rear were the assistant doorkeepers of the senate bearing the sealed mahogany boxes containing the sealed certificates of the electoral vote.

The double row of senators was headed by Col. Daniel M. Randall, the sergeant-at-arms, who was followed by the president pro tempore, Senator William P. Frye, of Maine.

The arrival of the senators at the door of the hall of the house was the signal for Speaker Cannon and the 385 other members of the lower body to rise from their seats.

All remained standing until the upper house was seated.

Beneath the large silk flag draped above the presiding officer's chair Senators Frye and Speaker Cannon took their seats side by side, the former on the right, being by statute the presiding officer of the joint session.

There was an absolute stillness throughout the gallery as Senator Frye took up the silver keys placed before him and unlocked the mahogany boxes.

This marked the actual beginning of the ceremony. Taking the large mahogany envelopes from the boxes, Senator Frye arose, gravel in hand, and addressed the assemblage thus:

"This being the day and the hour appointed for opening the certificates and counting the votes of electors for president and vice-president, the Senate and House of Representatives have met together pursuant to the constitution and laws of the United States."

WELL PLEASED

OVER THE CABINET CHOSEN BY WHITNEY.

What Various Citizens Had To Say To Whig Reporters About The Selections Made.

The Whig's bulletin board was closely scanned this afternoon as it contained the names of those chosen to fill portfolios in Whitney's cabinet for the province of Ontario.

In interviews leading conservatives had these words to say:

Donald McIntyre said: I think that the gentlemen selected by Mr. Whitney for the various portfolios will command the confidence of the country.

Nearly every one of them has had a lengthened experience in the legislature, and has thus gained a familiar acquaintance with public business.

Many of them, indeed, have special qualifications for the office to which they have been appointed. For instance, Dr. Pyle, who takes the portfolio of education has for years been secretary of the Ontario Medical Council, and has, in this way, acquired a special knowledge of our educational system.

On the whole I think the people of Ontario will have no feeling of disappointment when scanning over Whitney's selection.

Dr. Gaskin said: I had no doubt but that the premier had selected the men who, he thought, were most capable to fill the cabinet positions.

He knew only two or three of them. The most important positions, those of agriculture, crown lands and education, in his estimation, and required strong men. It would be hard for a new man to fill Hon. Mr. Dryden's place.

Capt. Gaskin claimed that Mr. Gurney was deserving of a cabinet position, and was fully capable of filling the office of minister of mines, to be created. Gurney, he holds
