It is very evident that somethic must be done beyond the mere mer incident upon its location. The city (or the council) has a con-

mittee on industries. To the Whig is is evident that this committee mus do more than angle, in a non con mittal way, for the attention of pros pective settlers. It should prepare basis for reasonable overtures. sould recommend something with regard to limited taxation (exemption teing impossible), with regard to power, and fire and light facilities. Cheap tum, and the council should know what it can do in this respect. Then there is the question of sites. It is important to the man of capital, manufacturing purposes? Outside the smelter site, (which nobody seems men going to pet their bait off Newto want), what lots are in the mar ket, and at what prices ? In Toronto, in Mr. Fleming's day, the information was at hand for any one who thought of that city for business purposes. Kingston has not any one whose occuation it is to place at the disposal pitalists the information they desire about the city and its prospects for "The facts should be prined off," ays a contemporary. What are they ? Brawing and sewing, and wood carvng? These may be called fads, bu they are most useful things, and contions and new impulses, but he will subject, also, to the guidance the educational counsels, and who will be conspicuous in these counsels still. It can, therefore, be taken for granted that the public school which it has taken many years to build will Harry Corby. Mr. Clute had the elonot be destroyed, even though Mr. Whitney, while in opposition, stormed about it, and said that it was that what it ought to be.

The three R's may be given a larger place, and agricultural subjects may be chief in the curriculum of the rural schoo's, but the programme of present, so far as the cities are con cerned, is not likely to undergo serious change. Talk is one thing, and J. Butler; treasurer, T. E. Ketcheson; action another.

ANNEXATION IS NEARER. The London Advertiser calls attention to the fact that the Bond-Blain treaty of 1890, provided for a liberal measure of reciprocity and that it would have passed the United States senate. But it was suspended by the imperial government, in deference to the protest of the Dominson govern ment, which claimed that the treaty discriminated against Canada in vor of the United States. "The re lations of all the North American provinces to the United States and the empire would be affected," said Sir John Macdonald, in a communication to the imperial authorities. The islanders were so indignant that they began a tariff war on a small scale against the dominion, followed by abortive negotiations for political likelihood of immediate trade between union in 1892.
