> > THE RETAIL MERCHANTS

To Blame For Not Patronizing City Wholesalers.

Kingston, March 5,-(To the Editos): In your issue of the 4th inst., you published an account of a meeting of retail merchants called for the purpose of uniting that body with the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada. The chief grievance, as far as can understand, is that the consumers are buying a lot of goods from large departmental stores in other cities, who sell cheaper, but inferior goods. Now I would just like to bring a point before the notice of our retail men in the city, I have no objections to them being united, in fact they should be, but I would suggest that they examine themselves, and make sure that there is not a beam in their

Do the retail men buy, as far as home? I think I can safely say that they do not. On many occasions not only small consignments have come to the city, but carloads of goods, to be divided amongst several retail stores here, sold by wholesale merchants in Toronto and Montreal, while exactly the same goods can be supplied by Kingston wholesalers at the same price. And again, the retail men say the wholesaler must not sell the consumers, but they reserve the right to give out-of-town wholesalers the pre erence when conditions are equal. This is just a little explanation to show, that the retailer of the city is not the only one who has a grievance.-AN OBSERVER.
