It has often struck me that in summer, at all events, one hour of work should alternate with one hour of play during school hours. In many rooms of our schools, children are not engaged in recitations all the time. The members of one class are scated at their desks while th members of mother are reciting. think it would be better if the former were allowed on the play ground while not reciting. The open air life is what children need to develop a strong, vigorous physical and mental make-up. Children in city schools especially need this, and they will need it more and more as the cities grow in size and there is less chance for them to get pure air and the right kind of exercise. One cannot have too much outdoor life, though this is too apt to be forgotten in the struggle for money and position. The children of the working men are those who most need it, and these are the very ones who get least of it. A change in school work along No one should suffer a moment long- the lines I have indicated is, I be-
