He has a record the question of separate schools which was in danger. On him has been imand Mr. Sifton, and also between the western members and the government. There was a double object to into the same boat with the western members, and then to get the premier and his colleagues to pull with Mr. Sifton and the western members. It was a delicate, difficult, and intricate embassage, but Mr. Greenway displayed great gifts as a diploma and likewise great patience and per-severance. His sparing speech and his stolid manner may have had some thing to do with it, for when a man gives his ultimatum and wraps him self in silence, the only thing that remains is for the other fellow to come to him. Mr. Greenway is, no doubt thankful that his anxious two weeks lowered on the horizon has disappeared. The western members were aware that the separate schools of the North-West had been receiving grants from this fund for years. They did not receive the money, perhaps. as separate schools, but rather as complied with the government stanled to share with the others. The fact remains, however, that separate
