A CHICAGO LETTER

ONE NIGHT'S RECORD OF CITY'S HOLD-UPS.

A Poor Little Waif—Rider Haggard Expected in Chicago—A Big Deal—Accident at Funeral—Canadians Ahead.

Special to the Whig.

Chicago, March 28.—Mary Smith, thirteen years old, who was arrested in a north side theatre, yesterday afternoon, charged with stealing $71 from Miss Susie Canodian, was held in the juvenile court to-day by Justice Mayer. Clinging to her father's hand, the girl wept and pleaded that the magistrate give her one more chance. "I'll never do it again," sobbed the girl. I saw the money and I took it. I do not know why I did."

Here is one night's record of hold-ups and robberies. Two masked armed robbers invaded R. M. Wilson's drug store, 252 Ashland boulevard, at 10.30 o'clock, last night, robbed the clerk, Harry Hull, of $15, and a gold watch and chain, took $10 from the cash register and smashed the "strong" box, which they took from the safe. The box contained nothing of value, and the robbers hurried from the place after locking Hull in a room behind the prescription counter. Four masked robbers beat Harry Smith, 190 Cass street, into insensibility, and robbed him of $10 and a gold watch, in front of the Polyclinic hospital, last night. The assault was witnessed by several people who were afraid to interfere. Two youths held up, and robbed Mrs. Mollie Linda, 605 Holt street, of her purse containing $15, last night, at Holt and Blackwell streets. Two robberies, one at Hammond, and the other at Whiting, have led the Indiana police to believe that a gang of Chicago robbers is operating there. The department store of Solomon Recht, in Whiting, was entered early yesterday morning, the safe blown open and money and valuables taken. At noon, yesterday, the office of the Michigan Central railroad in Hammond was entered, in the absence of Agent Dickenson, the cash drawer forced, and several hundred dollars secured by the thieves while many people were passing.

Her father dead, her earliest childhood spent in toil among strangers, little Mary Bekus, thirteen years old, travelled 4,000 miles from far away Poland to find her mother in Chicago. Two weeks after her arrival the woman died, and her second husband turned the little wanderer out into the streets, motherless and alone, with fifty cents and a bundle of clothing for her sole possessions. In the juvenile court the child told her story to Judge Mack. Mary was found by a policeman at Eighteenth street and Wabash avenue, vainly searching for some one to care for her. An hour later the child sobbed out her tale of misery upon the bosom of a sympathetic Poland woman at the Harrison street police station annex. Tears filled the child's eyes as she repeated the story to Judge Mack.

H. Rider Haggard, the English author, hunter, former government official of South Africa, and general all round good fellow, is expected to arrive in Chicago within the next forty-eight hours. The British colonial office has sent Mr. Haggard to this country. England finds itself confronted with a serious state of affairs. Her municipal population is choked; the idle in her large cities are growing in numbers at a terrible rate. "Unable to support themselves in the rural districts, they have been lured to the cities in the hope of finding employment, there which never comes to them," said Mr. Haggard recently. "You have here Salvation army settlements, land holdings, like those for instance in Utah, and it is the hope of the British colonial office that by means of the report I shall make, after my visits to these places, and from information gathered from other quarters and from other people, to arrive at some method of relief."

The biggest deal in the history of local terminal lines is being framed. It involves the purchase of the Chicago Terminal Transfer railroad company by the Vanderbilts and the Moore-Leeds syndicate. According to the report, the Moore-Leeds syndicate are to buy, or already have bought the majority stock of the terminal company, and will operate the system jointly, in the interest of the Rock Island and Lake Shore roads.

With the words "Well here goes," pencilled on a slip of paper found in his vest pocket, the body of Albert Sturm, forty years old, 175 Austin avenue, was found, yesterday afternoon, in the river near Randolph street bridge. It was taken to Jordan's undertaking rooms, 141 Madison street. The note was written in pencil, evidently just before Sturm made up his mind to end his life. It is as follows: "Good-bye all. Tell the boys in the shop good-bye for me. I am not doing this to get revenge on anyone, but I am tired of work. Well here goes." Sturm disappeared from his home on March 17th, and the police believe his body has been in the river since that time.

Rev. A. Dunlop King, proprietor of a hospital at 52 Lorins street, known as Queen Victoria Memorial hospital, had in his employ a young woman named Banes. Owing to some dispute she left and afterwards Dr. King missed two medical books. He then procured a warrant for Miss Banes' arrest, but on trial she was acquitted. She in turn sues Dr. King for $15,000 damages and has been awarded $1,000.

Fright and horror were added to the grief of mourners at a funeral when an Evanston electric car wrecked the hearse carrying the body of Mrs. Elizabeth Newman while the funeral procession was passing the crossing of Chicago and Keeney avenues. The driver and coffin were thrown into the street by the collision, and the horses dashed madly down the street, dragging the wrecked vehicle dangerously near several carriages. After an hour's delay another hearse was secured, and the funeral was continued to Calvary cemetery, where the body was interred.

The engagement is announced of Miss Edith A. Taylor, second daughter of Edward Taylor, of Toronto, to Maximill an C. S. Reuhl, of Blue Island, and S. Oakly avenue, Chicago. The board of directors of the Northern Trust company have promoted Robert McLeod, its chief clerk, who has been with that bank for a number of years, to the position of assistant cashier. Mr. McLeod is a native of Montreal, Canada, and is deservedly popular with the officers and patrons of the Northern Trust company. George Buckley, for twenty-three years custodian of the Chicago terminal station of the Illinois Central railroad, died at his home 6611 Jefferson avenue, on Monday. Mr. Buckley came to this country from Dublin, in 1883, and entered into the railroad service at Cairo. He leaves a widow and two children. Miss Mary Cowan, of Peotone, Ill., died in Mercy hospital, Chicago, on February, after undergoing a second surgical operation. She was aged forty-seven, and was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Cowan, deceased, being born near Seaforth, Ont. She came with her parents to Peotone, Ill., in 1875, and settled on a farm near town. A few years ago they moved into Peotone. She leaves two brothers and one sister to mourn her loss; Hector, of Sanborn, Iowa; Alexander and Miss Agnes, of Peotone. Stayner, Ont., people will remember the meteorite that passed across the sky with a flash and roar on the 13th of August last. It fell on the farm of John Shields, near Shelburne, Ont., as was noted at the time. Mr. Shields has just sold the meteorite to Oliver C. Farrington, Ph.D., curator of geology in the Field Columbian Museum, of Chicago, for the sum of $500. Mr. Shields to be furnished with a cast of the meteorite and a small portion of it. Mr. Farrington went to Shelburne and made the purchase personally.

"And you stole your mother's wedding ring, sold it for one dollar, and spent the money for whiskey?" Justice Meyer glared at Gabriel Macius, who stood with bowed head before him in the Chicago avenue police court. The prisoner was silent. "That he did," spoke up H. Kerswitter, the man's step-father. "He took it from our house, 313 Chicago avenue." It developed that Macius' thirst for liquor was so strong that it was utterly beyond his control. "A man who would steal his mother's wedding ring to satisfy his thirst for liquor," said the magistrate, "deserves no consideration here, and will get none. "I will fine you $50 and costs." The ring that Macius took was the only piece of jewelry Mrs. Kerswitter, his mother, possessed. It was given her by Macius' father forty years ago, and was prized as a keepsake. Hospital ships for drunkards were proposed by Dr. C. L. Mix, expert in the treatment of alcoholism, in a lecture in the fine arts' building. "There is a beautiful chance to isolate inebriates on the lakes," he said. "It is a British idea. Old boats might be utilized and anchored in the harbor. The only objection is the lack of employment, but this might be met. An habitual drunkard is a diseased man. Inebriates should be divided into the hospital class and the convalescents. Physical suffering should be looked after first. What does a Bridewell keeper know of these things? Sending drunkards to the Bridewell is archaic. 'It is a grave question whether prohibition should be supported. There is no proof the drinking passion has been lessened by prohibition. It teaches disregard for the law."—W. HARRY SPEARS.

A VERY SUDDEN DEATH

Occurred In Napanee on Wednesday.

Napanee, March 30.—Another inexpressibly sad and sudden death took place in our midst, yesterday morning, when Harry Ruttan, only son of Mr. and Mrs. T. F. Ruttan, died after but twenty-four hours' illness of Bright's disease. The deceased was but nineteen years of age, a bright and clever young man and his death came as a shock to his parents. He attended the Collegiate Institute here until after Christmas, when he complained a little of his head, but was never confined to the house. The funeral will take place this afternoon at two o'clock; services at the house. The grief stricken parents are receiving the condolences of very many friends.

A Safe Rheumatic Cure.
In the effort to find something that would cure rheumatic affections, harsh and harmful remedies have often been used. This is totally unnecessary, as has been proved by the results from Dr. Hall's Rheumatic Cure, which is a safe and harmless remedy. It cures because it does precisely what is required to cure in the most natural way. It assists the kidneys and liver to perform their functions properly. It neutralizes the poisonous elements in the blood and expels them from the system. Years of success has proved its merits. This is the preparation that cured Almond Joslin, Wolfe Island, and hundreds of others. In bottles, 50c., at Wade's drug store.

London Tramp Murderer.
London, Ont., March 30.—A story is told in the San Francisco Examiner of March 21st, that a tramp giving his name as Earl Roy Bodine and his home as London, Ont., had confessed to Evangelist J. L. McComb, in Oakland, that he had murdered a fellow-tramp in Maine in 1897. Bodine is twenty-five years old, and has been a tramp for eight years, ever since he got away from London. He had a quarrel with the tramp referred to, whose name he never knew, shot him with a revolver, and threw the body in the Aroostook river. He had ever since been a victim of remorse, but after meeting with the evangelist he confessed his crime, and, having made up his mind to lead a new life, he surrendered to the police at Oakland, Cal. He says he is a son of Marshall Bodine, of this city.
