WOMEN ARE UNFAIR. And for That Reason Should Be Kept Out of Jury Box. London, April 3.—"Women are unfair," was the assertion of John Oliver Hobbes (Mrs. Craigie) in the course of a debate at the Harbottle Society on a resolution that no jury is complete without women as members. There were several distinguished debaters on both sides of the question. Mrs. Craigie was against participation of her sex in the administration of justice. She declared that their nature did not admit of a proper object of justice. They were by nature untruthful, though their unfairness in some instances was a source of fascination. Hobbes had been very sympathetic, she asked, if women were impartial? Showing, however, that women were not in fact impartial, and that they represented the woman impersonating justice as being blindfolded, because a woman could not be trusted to see straight.
