YOUNG WOMAN'S STRANGE! ACT DURING SERVICE.

Recited Poem From Chancel-Resumed Seat in Front Pew After

Montreal, April 3,-The recital of Mrs. Havergal's poem, "What Will You Do Without?" by a young woman from the steps before the chancel rail, was the remarkable incident that first startled and then awed the eongregation of St. Martin's church during the divine service yesterday

The incident occurred immediately after the offertory had been presented, sidesmen returned to their seats in the congregation, and the rector, Rev. G. Osborne Troop, laid collection plate upon the comnunion table, while reciting the offertory sentence, "God is not unrightethe steps of the chancel, facing the ongregation. With open book in front her she waited for the last words of the offertory sentence: Then, as Rev. Mr. Troop was about to commence the prayer for the church militant, the opening lines of the poem, "I could not do without thine, Jesus is more to me;" fell upon the astonished ears of rector and his congregayoung woman went through the long poem of thirteen stanzas of eight lines each. The poem finished, the reciter resumed her seat, and the rector proceeded with the service. The incident, due probably to the effects of a mind overwrought on re-able from the fact that the reciter is known as one of the most unostenta tious retiring members of the congregation. A devoted church worker, she ranks as the most efficient teacher in the Sunday school.
