May Change The Approaches. A change is advocated in building of he gate approaches in connection with concrete walks. The present ones block the water tables, unless a pipe is laid underneath. It is likely that the former kind of approaches, those plank, will have to be re-introduc d, so that water may pass underneath. On some streets the stone and ement approaches have blocked the passage of water to the grates, when t was very necessary that it should have an uninterrupted flow.
