The Revolutionizing of the Cracker
Mooney revolutionized the cracker. He made folk admit that they never knew how good crackers could be, by making such delicious crackers as they had never tasted before. Then he set folk to eating Mooney's crackers who'd never eaten crackers before. In a year he had all Canada eating Mooney's Cream Sodas

GIRLS KILL A LYNX AND SO SAVE THEIR PET DOG FROM ANIMAL.

One Wrestled the Dog From the Jaws of the Lynx While the Other Killed it With a Shot—A Savage Struggle Was Witnessed.
Northport, Wash., April 10.—While a maddened lynx was worrying the life out of the pet dog, the Phillips sisters attacked the monster. One literally wrestled the dog from the claws of the lynx, while the other killed the animal with a shot through the head.
Faye and Florence Phillips, aged seventeen and nineteen, respectively, live with their father, Fred S. Phillips, on the reservation side of the Columbia, near the mouth of Big Sheep Creek, two miles from Northport. The hired man who had been chopping wood near the creek, ran home the other day to tell that the dog had tried a large cougar. Mr. Phillips was not at home, but his daughters seized rifles from the wall and went along. The dog had the best of it until one of the higher limbs of the wild animal glared down at the young women. Both girls fired. The wounded beast shrieked with rage, bounded into the air and landed on the ground a few feet from the girls, who were equally reloading their weapons.
The moment the beast struck the ground it was attacked by the dog. The animals rolled over and over in a savage struggle, but the lynx was too much for the dog who began emitting yelps of distress. So rapid were the movements of the animals that the girls feared to shoot, because they might hit their pet dog. Finally the dog emitted a howl of mortal agony. It was too much for the girls. They rushed to the rescue. One grasped the dog's hind legs and pulled the combatants apart, while the other sent a bullet through the head of the lynx.

PRETTY ROMANCE
Millionaire's Daughter Marries a Poor Clerk.
Hot Springs, Ark., April 10.—Miss Pearl M. White, daughter of W. J. White, the millionaire gum manufacturer, of Cleveland, and former congressman, was secretly married here today, to James L. Bancroft, who, three weeks ago was a clerk behind the desk of one of the prominent hotels of Palm Beach, Florida.
The wedding was the culmination of a romance which started with love at first sight. Bancroft gave up his position on the second day after meeting Miss White. His home is in Brookline, Mass., and he is twenty-five years of age. His parents are poor.
After the first meeting of the young folks, Bancroft was invited to join a golfing party, which he did.

Woman And Her Hat.
Books Of To-Day.
Much consternation has been caused recently by a statement made by Judge Bacon that seven and sixpence is quite enough for a woman's hat. This is a serious matter. Economy in the matter of hats is the last folly of the paper. The best hat should combine the efforts of the old masters and the new milliners. A good hat can never be cheap. To be hedged about by seven-and-six-penny millinery is, of course, to invite failure. It is only the women who are failures that find men grumble at expenditure.

Palpitation of the heart, nervousness, tremblings, nervous headache, cold hands and feet, pain in the back, and other forms of weakness are relieved by Carter's Iron Pills, made specially for the blood, nerves and complexion.
The daughter of the regiment may not be the only girl with an army of admirers.

Catarrhoozone!

Doctors Know It Cures Catarrh and Prevents Its Return.
Any medical man will tell you the majority of catarrh medicines are worthless; they fail because they can't reach the source of the disease. When the nostrils, throat and lungs are inflamed with cold and catarrh, no amount of stomach medicine will bring relief. The treatment must be more direct.
Catarrhoozone is breathed over every vestige of inflamed membrane. Wherever the secretions of catarrh are found, there Catarrhoozone goes. No wonder it cures so quickly.
WHY CATARRHOOZONE CURES
It Reaches the Disease, Kills all the Germs, Allays the inflammation, Subdues the Discharge, Heals the Sore Spots, Clears the Air Passages.
YOUR MONEY BACK IF IT FAILS
No treatment is simpler or more pleasant. No remedy any freer from pernicious drugs. You simply inhale Catarrhoozone—its medicated vapor does the rest. Won't you use Catarrhoozone and be cured? Two months' treatment costs, but $1.00. Sample size 25 cents at all dealers, or by mail from N. C. Polson & Co., Hartford, Conn., U.S.A., and Kingston, Ont.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

can hardly think that the few cents which would result from the sale of this ten-cent reprint would be sufficient to actuate Prof. Cappon to do the injury that such a course would mean to the Quarterly, which in a few days would be placed on sale alongside the pamphlet.

I knew nothing of this article until I heard of it through the local newspapers. I at once procured one of the reprints and readily saw the harm it would do the Quarterly if it appeared in that magazine. I brought this to the attention of the committee and explained that if the Quarterly was published containing this article we would not only lose many more subscribers, but following directly after the same writer's article in the January issue, would mean the magazine in a manner that would require much time and effort to redeem. I also explained that in this number I was the one man who would suffer from it, and that the debt would be larger at the end of the next two years than it is now. I further explained that this was not the only way in which it would affect me. On the representation that the Quarterly was to be a high-class publication and neither partisan nor sectarian, I have solicited and received subscriptions from members of all denominations and both sides of politics. On the distinct understanding that it was not to contain articles that would be apt to offend the religious susceptibilities of a member of any denomination, a number of the public school inspectors had recommended the magazine to their teachers and ratifiers and required that it be kept on file in the school. I considered that I would be violating this agreement in an unpardonable manner if I retained my position as business manager and allowed my article as Prof. Cappon was attempting to force into the Quarterly, to be carried by that magazine into the schools or into the homes of many of the subscribers, who have paid their subscriptions on the understanding that they were to get a different class of publication.
For these reasons I concluded I would be compelled to resign my position, if they insisted on publishing the article in the Quarterly. In taking this stand I gave them my assurance that I had no desire to assume the slightest control over the editorial work. I recognized that the department was entirely in the hands of the editors. But while that was so, they should recognize that both the editorial and business departments were largely dependent upon one another, and a course that would injure one could not but affect the other. But apart from this I am sure that the friends of the Quarterly and of the university as well as all earnest citizens will agree that with all the political and sectarian magazines and papers, we have in this country, it was surely possible to keep the pages of the Quarterly for a higher class of work. If this was not the desire of the publishing committee, they should have kept their magazine within the limited sphere in which it was, before I became its business manager. Or, having contracted with me to increase the circulation and after I had put so much money into the undertaking they should have waited until my term expired, before they began to alienate subscribers, after much expenditure and effort. In the meantime I instructed the printer not to proceed further with the issue until the difficulty was settled.
A meeting of the publishing committee was called and a resolution passed to the effect that the article must be published in the Quarterly. A copy of the resolution was sent to me and I replied that I did not see how I could change my mind, nor to have anything more whatever to do with the Quarterly. The next communication I received was the following telegram dated April 5th:
"Unless you are willing to publish Friday noon to issue complete Quarterly, we will advertise in Toronto papers reason of delay." Sign'd R. V. Rogers.
In reply to this I sent the following telegram:
"Cannot allow your threat to interfere with my duty. Does the committee desire to meet me before we get so far apart that it will be difficult to come together?"
I received no reply to this and on Saturday the advertisement, already quoted, appeared in the Toronto papers.

Such anxiety to hurry the matter to the attention of the public, is, in itself, sufficient evidence of the motives which actuated these men in the course they have taken. But they have given us much more tangible proof than this. No sooner had the trouble occurred than one or two members of the committee assumed by an equal will to pervert the truth for a little political capital. Such an accusation is as false as it is dangerous, and I want to give it a denial as emphatic as I can command words to express.
The only men from whom I have sought advice, are men, high in the councils of the university. When I wanted the advice of a lawyer, I went not to one of my own church, nor to one out of touch with Queen's, but to a fellow alumnus, who at the same time is a member of the university council. Another member of the committee has endeavored to explain how I had compromised with a Roman Catholic, they would be doing the university an injury. If by this he meant that because I was a Catholic, the committee could not do me a member of another denomination, I learn for the first time, that there is an element in Queen's not worthy of that broad Christian spirit, which the late Principal Grant so well established.

As an evidence of the business principles of those with whom I have had to deal permit me to relate an incident, which was related after to me by one of their own number. When the committee began to realize that they would, in all probability have to meet the cost of the work already put on the article, they ascertained the amount from the printer. The figures he submitted were based on the terms of his contract. But the committee thinking that it was too high, fixed their own price, and authorized two of the members to go to the printer and say that, if he would not accept their offer they would take the university printing away from him. It is only necessary for me to add, that the printer's contract was received from Toronto and Kingston, in order that this incident may serve as an evidence of the truth of the late Cecil Rhodes' remark, when he says, that university professors in business are apt to be as children.

In conclusion, however, I want to assure the readers of this letter that such actions as I have just related, and forced into the notice of the public is entirely out of keeping with the ideals and principles to which I want to form the atmosphere at Queen's. Those whose work and lives give expression to the spirit of the university committee or are disposed to keep away from many of the meetings, let me also assure you that the men at Queen's who will injure the best life of the university through other ends are few, but the pity is there are any.
Yours very truly, J. J. HARPELL.

ANNOUNCEMENT.

WE have the honor to announce to the public that we have made arrangements with LUCIOS, of TORONTO, for the exhibition and sale of LUCIOS' SEMI-PRECIOUS GEMS.
The Opening Sale
WILL BEGIN
Wednesday, April 12

The entire stock which we shall exhibit has been brought intact from WORLD'S FAIR, ST. LOUIS, U.S.A., where it was awarded

A GOLD MEDAL
For being "The most perfect imitation of a genuine diamond ever discovered."

These goods were manufactured especially for the Exhibition by our own artisans and represent the very latest and best creations from the jewel and art centres of Europe.

Lucios

Is absolutely the most perfect imitation of the genuine diamond known. They are a substance of recent discovery made possible by the newly acquired knowledge of radium and are universally used in the scientific manufacture of Diamonds, Rubies, Emeralds and Sapphires. They are a pure, brilliant crystal refined, clarified, cut and polished by expert diamond cutters. They have never before been offered for sale in this city.

LUCIOS is the sole owner and importer of these gems and absolutely controls the world's supply of these crystals and by the application of modern and scientific methods in cutting, mounting and setting, is able to offer a semi-precious stone set in substantial mountings at prices no higher than asked for cheap and worthless imitations.

We extend to the public a most cordial invitation to call and see our magnificent display and to examine these rare, artistic and beautiful jewels.

A BOLD FINANCIER.
Erstwhile Resident of Canada Started Big Business.
London, April 10.—Rippeley Reynolds, alias Count de Rosdante, was charged at Bow street with fraudulent bankruptcy in France to the extent of £100,000. He has carried on amazing financial transactions. At the time of his arrest he was worth £250,000, made in speculation on the London stock exchange. He lived some years in Canada, but does not seem to have found there much scope for his financial genius, for he returned to Paris and opened the Credit International bank, almost next to the Rothschilds' bank, on a capital of £2,000,000, which he possessed.
