MELLOW WITH AGE

Our coal has ripened in the depths of Mother Earth since the far-off day when the world was young—when mighty forests decayed in swamps and left us masses of pure carbon or coal.

But some coal has not been in the Earth long enough—retains still too much of its original wood constituents. Other coal has become mixed with the slag or stone of the ground.

We don't carry either of these last two kinds.

Try a ton and see.

Give Canada Her Due.

A great fuss was made in parliament over an alleged contract for boundary line fencing, and to the value of hundreds of thousands of dollars. The opposition held that a scandal had been committed, a great and grievous scandal, and it demanded all the papers in the case.

It seems that last year—months ago—the ranchers asked for the fence in protection of their interests. The deputy minister of the interior did not approve of it. He thought that the fence, if needed, should be erected by the owners of the land. The minister of the interior asked Commissioner Perry, of the North-West Mounted Police, to report upon the matter, and Perry said the Canadian cattle interests were being menaced by American cattle encroaching upon Canadian territory. In one instance 531 head of cattle had been seized and held until all expenses had been paid and the duty had been deposited. South of Cypress Hills between two and three thousand cattle, and sheep in large numbers, had been pasturing in Canada.

While the correspondence was going on the McGregor-Barwell Fence company offered to rear the fence along the boundary line for $550 per mile and $10 for each gate. This was in January. Mr. Sifton invited an expert's opinion as to the work and its value. Other firms asked for permission to tender. One of these firms was the Page company, of Walkerville, and to their enquiry a clerk in the department of the interior wrote that the contract had been awarded. This was the letter on which the opposition depended, and which caused all the commotion. It did not state the fact, for the case is unsettled. When last heard from the deputy minister of justice had reported upon it, saying that in his opinion the fence should be undertaken by the public works department, and that public tenders for it should be invited.

In this connection the public interests have been fully safeguarded because the law enacted this session provides that for all contracts above $5,000 tenders will have to be invited. It is provided that the ministers individually, even after they have asked for tenders, shall not have the power to give contracts, but that the matter shall be brought before the governor-in-council, and the governor-in-council alone gives the contracts.

Canadians Abroad.

Buffalo Courier.

When it comes to an actual question of qualification, scientific attainments and a variety of other essentials, in the United States, the best man is likely to get in without much regard to the master of his nativity; and the heads of the people of the United States, that is rather more to his honor than to their discredit. But the Hamilton Spectator could hardly have meant with full gravity its suggestion that perhaps Canada should stop educating her young men because so many of them utilize their equipment for effort in other countries. Dr. Oser came into the United States to avail himself of superior opportunities, just as now he goes away from us to England. But of himself, and through his success, he has earned a measure of glory for Canada and for its schools, and doubtless Canadians generally are proud of him. Canada should be proud of making scholars of her young men, who have the foundation of talent, even if they were all to go away. They will not all go; there are opportunities for the advancement of such men in the Dominion, and the demand for scholarship will naturally increase with national growth.

BISHOP DEFENDS STAGE.

The Strong Words of Bishop of Rochester.

The dramatic impulse is too deep, too natural, too universal, too human, and too lovely for me to believe that it is meant for nothing but suppression, that it is nothing but an instrument of Satan, that it has not its purpose for the brightening, refining, refreshing and elevating of life.

In these striking words the Bishop of Rochester, England, defended the actor's calling.

Dr. Talbot was preaching on behalf of the Actors' Church Union, which he defined as a little effort on the part of the church to bridge the gulf which has been said to divide church and stage.

When he was asked: "Do you condemn the stage and taboo actors?" he answered, "No."

"I see," said the bishop, "as do members of the profession, the greatness of their dangers, I see that a life is full of danger, which compels its devotees continually to go out of themselves into parts which they play, which makes it the business of women to rivet upon themselves the gaze of the mixed multitude, which throws a man and woman together under circumstances of excitement, and which gives manumission its opportunities to play the devil's part of tempter and tyrant.

"All the greater, therefore, is the obligation of Christian people to help actors to keep up the standard of their profession, and to make the demands such, and only such, as actors can rightly and honorably supply."

The preacher emphasized the fact that the playgoer, and not the player, was really responsible for the undesirable play.

"We ought," he said, "to be able to claim for the Christian people of West London the inexorable determination not to go to plays which are risky or shady, or all those other glowing alternatives of what is partly bad.

"We ought to manipulate in the interests of virtue the influence which is exercised on the character of the supply by the character of the demand: It ought to be done. We ought to bind ourselves to do it.

"It is one of the cases, of which society knows a good many, where the simple duty of drawing the line is a duty which we allow to be whittled away by every sort of weakness and cowardry. It is a little thought, a little self-denial, and for some a little pluck. It ought to be done for our own sake and the church's honor, and also for the sake of a profession which spends itself, and often risks itself, too, in the public service."
