Many Daring Robberies-A Well-Known Miner Home for His Holidays.

rom Our Own Correspondent. Chicago, May 21.—Monday morning the police found the body of E. Connelley, a painter, at his home on Sixty-third street. There were bullet holes in Connelley's head, two revolvers lying near him with an empty chamber in each; and it is thought the man committed suicide. From the condition of the body when found, they judged he had been dead some days. An investigation is being made. About seventy-five negroes employed by a coal company, marched in Twenty-third street on Saturday night, throwing stones and other missiles at people, breaking windows in houses and stores and doing other damage to property. Some had narrow escapes from being seriously hurt by the flying stones. There was great deal of property damaged. A startling story has been told by little girl only ten years old. The John F. Leidig, she told the following dreadful story. She says while her mother lay sleeping with a little oneyear-old child in her arms, the stepfather poured coal oil over her and hen set fire to her. The real story is that Mrs. Leidig was lighting a fire using coal oil to start it, and the flames ignited her clothing: She then

Yesterday morning about five o'clock Eva Dakin, a concert hall singer, shot and killed Charles Bennet, one of the two men who robbed her of her purse. Miss Dakin was taken to the Desplaines street station pending an investigation into the circumstances surrounding the shooting. Last night about ten o'clock four thieves, after robbing the jewellery store of T. D. Lande, West Madison street, held a crowd of over two hundred persons at hay with revolver and escaped. Just as Mr. Lande was about to leave the store for the night the four robbers entered and prevented him from leaving by barring the front door thus rendering him unable to get assistance. They then proceeded to load themselves down with the valuable jewellery. They carried off over $4,000 worth in diamonds. It is believed the same gang robbed the jewellery store
