AT THE POLICE COURT.

Magistrate Found Barnack to be Justified in Peddling. At the police court, this morning, Magistrate Farrell rendered judgment in the case of the city versus Chaim Barnack, who was charged with selling goods without the necessary icenses. At the hearing a week ago it was shown that Barnack had purchased a peddler's license, but prosecution contended that the deendant, being a resident of the city. required a transient trader's license W. F. Nickle for the defense argued It is said of Lord Rosebery that his that his client did not come within as Barnack had no fixed place of business and made no sales of goods from his lodging place. Mr. Nickle claimed that the by-law was not intended to prohibit this or similar business done by bona fide peddlers who have taken out the hecessary license. The magistrate said he was convinced from careful reading of the law that a transient trader must not only occupy premises but occupy them for business as a trader, and not merely for storage of goods. The accused did not occupy premises as a trader, and therefore he was justified in trading with a peddler's license, as he had done.
