Czar Not Ready to Yield.

St. Petersburg, June 7.—Diplomats here, are not sanguine of the practical result of the negotiations proceeding at Washington, as there is still no evidence that Emperor Nicholas is ready to yield. Confesses to Slaying Mother After Being Acquitted.

Melbourne, June 7.—Rosina Hubbard, a dwarf of twenty-seven years, acquitted last month of poisoning her mother, has confessed her guilt. During her trial she alleged that her stepfather administered arsenic to her mother in order that she might not come between him and herself. She said her stepfather put the arsenic on oysters and in beef tea on several occasions, and that he told her what to say to the detectives, if there was any inquires as to her mother's death. The crown department was not satisfied with the acquittal, and began further investigations, which led to the confession of Rosina Hubbard. She declared that she loved her stepfather, and did not him to suffer, as he was innocent. As she has already been found not guilty, the police are unable to take proceedings against her.

Togo Seemed Tireless During Great Battle.

RUSSIANS FIRE HIGH

MIKASA, TOGO'S FLAGSHIP, READY FOR ACTION.

Russians Trusted to Superior Strength of Fleet—Linevitch Wants War—Czar Not Ready to Yield to Peace Proposals.

Special to the Whig. The Telegraph's London, June 7.—The Telegraph's Tokyo correspondent says that the Mikasa, Admiral Togo's flagship, was in the thick of the battle. The Mikasa received most of her hits on the starboard side, and in the coming tower, little damage, however, was done. The masts and funnels were hit more than any other part of the ship, showing that the fire of the Russians was high. The Mikasa is now ready for action again.

At the beginning of the battle, Admiral Togo was wounded in the head. Two other officers, and thirteen non-commissioned officers were also wounded. The Russian fleet, however, was larger than any of the other large warships. While Admiral Togo was in the coming tower, giving orders, a splinter from a shell wounded a lieutenant by his side. Admiral Togo was hit in the knee, and tenderly lifted the young officer. Throughout the battle he never left the bridge, and seemed tireless. Admiral Togo quitted his ship for the first time after the victory on June 2nd, when he went ashore solely to visit Admiral Rojstevsky.

Trusted to Strong Fleet.

Tokio, June 7.—A Russian officer, who is a prisoner at Saesdo, states that he believes in the superior strength of the Russian fleet made the crews extremely confident of victory. The Russian officers attribute the defeat to defective reconnoitering on the part of the Russian and French sailors. The disposition of the main Japanese fleet, Admiral Rojstevsky is making satisfactory progress towards recovery from his wounds.

DESPOT CHIEF

NATIVES GAVE IN

AFTER THEY FOUND THEIR HEAD GONE.

Account of Ruler's Power Over Tribe Given by First Detachment of British Soldiers Back From Niam-Niam Expedition.

Khartoum, June 7.—The first detachment of the Niam-Niam expedition, which has returned, gave an interesting account of the capture of a powerful chief named Yambio.

Lieut. Piff offered to talk with Yambio if the men would lay down their spears. They agreed to do so, but took them up again as soon as the British soldiers approached. On their doing this the second time, and after full warning, two or three volleys were fired and the enemy killed.

A couple of days later some prisoners undertook to show Yambio's hiding place. He was surprised and caught, and brought in by Capt. Carter. It appeared that he had been badly wounded in the wrist and knee. Everything was done to save him, but either through shock or fear he died the same afternoon.

It was evident that he had been the mainstay of the whole revolt, and that from the first his people wanted to come in, but were kept back by him. He ruled his people with extreme severity, his only punishment was death, and this was meted out frequently for the slightest offence.

Large numbers of women and girls were found closely confined and jealously guarded in his village. All were released and sent back to their villages whenever possible.

Another tribe captured was the sultan's great war drum. It stands four feet high, is out of a single tree trunk, and is carved to represent a buffalo.

At Yambio's funeral there was no great display of grief, which was pointed out by a British officer, an Arab speaking native answered: "No; they are not sorry, for if Yambio had died a natural death and had been buried by his own people, at least 200 of them would have been slain at the same time."

According to the Niam-Niam custom the body was tied in a sitting position, with the hands closed, and brought up to the side, and the legs carried slightly to the left. It was placed in a circular grave.
